FROTHINGHAM TAKES OFFICE AS GOV. FOSS DEPARTS FOR WEST

Chief Executive Leaves the City for San Francisco, Where He Will Attend Wedding of His Son

ABSENT TWO WEEKS

Speaker Joseph Walker Transfers the Scene of His Campaign to the Eastern Section of the State

Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham suspended his campaign activities today and took up the duties of chief executive when Governor Foss left for California this afternoon to attend the wedding of his son Benjamin. Mr. Frothingham's term as temporary executive head of the state will last about two weeks, as the Governor plans to return late in August. During this interim it is understood that Mr. Frothingham will personally devote little time to his campaign, leaving this in the hands of his political managers.

Before leaving Governor Foss talked on the coming gubernatorial contest, declaring that this fall would see a state-wide revolt by the public against the present method of handling corporations and taxation.

"The taxation issue is the most important one that will come up," said Governor Foss. "I know of hardly a thing that means so much to the prosperity of the state. Why, only the other day I was told of several millions of capital that would not come to this state because of oppressive taxation laws. In brief, Massachusetts' taxation laws are 300 years behind time."

"I want to see the state commissions reorganized. We need more central authority in them. It is idle to suppose that such superb organizations as the corporations can be successfully supervised by such wretched organizations as our state boards."

"As for the state itself, I want to see its farming industry built up—a thing about which I shall speak considerably in the coming campaign."

"I don't believe that Republicans know how thoroughly out of touch with the voters their party has grown. A generation of colorless state administration first encouraged apathy, then revolt, lost the Republicans the head of the ticket last year; it will sweep away the rest of it this fall."

The executive council convened for a special meeting at 10 o'clock this morning. Reports were current that the appointment by the Governor last week of Frederick J. Macleod of Cambridge as chairman of the railroad commission would be confirmed at the regular meeting on Wednesday.

Speaker Joseph Walker has transferred his campaign operations from the western to the eastern section of the state. He left his home in Brookline early today for Marlboro for a conference with his campaign managers there. During the day he swept around through the towns of Hudson, Maynard, Acton, Littleton, Chelmsford, Billerica and Arlington.

This evening he will be tendered a reception by leading Republicans of Arlington at 128 Pleasant street. An invitation to attend has been extended to all the citizens of the town. Mr. Walker is expected to make a short address.

The speaker will make his first campaign address in Malden Friday morning when he will be the guest of a delegation of the Republicans of the city at the Malden club. All the merchants of Malden as well as many other business and professional men who will be in the city Friday have been invited to attend. Representative Norman H. White will be the guest of Republicans at the Richardson hotel, Lowell, this evening. Besides holding a reception and speaking briefly Mr. White plans to outline to his

He said that the order did not prohibit that, but an executive order issued by President Taft in 1909 did carry the prohibition in express terms.

Mr. McCabe confirmed statements made by other witnesses that an order of Secretary Wilson's prohibited employees in the department, other than in the solicitor's office, from advising United States attorneys about the preparation of cases.

With the permission of the committee Solicitor McCabe read a statement about the prosecutions under the food and drug law, conducted by his office under his direction.

The antagonism toward Dr. Keblor, who with Dr. Wiley and Dr. Bigelow are under charges in connection with the Rusby appointment, was shown plainly in Solicitor McCabe's manner.

Dr. Henry H. Rusby, whose appointment as pharmacologist brought about the inquiry, related to the committee today all the circumstances connected with his employment, and the change in his compensation from $9 a day to $1600 a year.

SAD-EYED HUMORISTS ADMIT TRYING JOKES ON THEIR WIVES FIRST

How a man knows that he is a humorist previous to applying for membership in the American Press Humorists and why the average humorist is sad-eyed, were questions which members of the association, now in Boston on their ninth annual convention, endeavored to answer at an informal business meeting at their headquarters at the Brunswick this morning.

W. K. Maxwell of the Peoria (Ill.) Herald-Transcript said that a man was a humorist if his wife laughed at his jokes.

R. P. McPhee of the Springfield (Mass.) Union said that every man in his heart believed himself a humorist.

"Sitting under a weeping willow tree and shedding tears is the humorist's idea of a real vacation," said J. H. Donahay of the Cleveland (O.) Plain Dealer, who admitted that he was a humorist.

W. R. Rose, also of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, said that in all his wanderings he had never met a sad humorist.

The bankroll, or rather its absence, was argued for their characteristic gloom, according to Edgar Guest of the Detroit Free Press.

"We have a record for the largest out put at the smallest recompense, and we have the fewest opportunities on the paper of putting in expense accounts. Humorists scatter sunshine, but cannot coin it. Think of the expense of sending out manuscripts to editors lacking in a sense of humor accompanied by stamps for return. We are all for 1 cent postage," said Mr. Guest.

"We are melancholy because Cy Warman took advantage of his position as president yesterday and sprang an original joke," said Frank Sullivan of the Boston Globe. "He was standing before the cage of a golden eagle at Norumbega park, an eagle of many colors, but no

AEROPLANE MANEUVERS OVER BATTLESHIPS OFF

PROVINCETOWN, Mass.—The aerial maneuvers in connection with the battleship practice of the north Atlantic fleet assembled here, have been called off. According to Admiral Osterhaus sufficient progress has not yet been made in aerial maneuvers to warrant such tests. It is considered impracticable to try them out at this port because of the necessity of the fleet maneuvering so far from the mainland.

Admiral Osterhaus has expressed satisfaction with the results achieved by the fleet during the maneuvers of the past month. Almost to a man the officers of the fleet favor Massachusetts waters as summer drill grounds. The fleet will begin to disperse Friday and by Tuesday the last of the half hundred ships in the harbor will have left Massachusetts waters until another year.

When the fleet appeared in the harbor this morning the flag of the secretary of the navy was flying from the battle flagship Nebraska, Assistant Secretary Beekman Winthrop having arrived by torpedo destroyer from the Charleston navy yard to inspect the fleet. Shortly before 11 o'clock he left the Nebraska. His flag was lowered. A few minutes later it was hoisted to the masthead of the Michigan which ship he boarded for luncheon and presented to the officers and men the highly prized marksmanship and seamanship trophies won by them. The occasion was one of great rejoicing. Cheers which followed the presentation could be heard by every ship in the fleet.

Shortly after 9 this morning Admirals Ward, Howard, Badger and Stanton, commanding divisions of the fleet, boarded the Nebraska, officially to pay their respects to Winthrop and Rear Admiral Osterhaus. These official visits were returned at once by the secretary and Admiral Osterhaus. This afternoon the fleet will go to the maneuver grounds, 20 miles down the bay. The practice will extend until after midnight, the torpedo fleet making another attack. It will be witnessed by Assistant Secretary Winthrop.

It is understood Mr. Winthrop will remain with the fleet until the arrival of Admiral Togo, who is scheduled to arrive here about noon Thursday. The Japanese hero will be brought from the

ATWOOD PREPARING TO FLY TOWARD BOSTON OVER LAKE MICHIGAN

CHICAGO — Harry N. Atwood's start today from the Grant park aerodrome, when he will soar out over lake Michigan on the second day of his cross-country biplane flight from St. Louis to New York and Boston will be the leading feature of the aviation meet in progress here.

Early today Atwood overhauled his Burgess-Wright machine and pronounced it in good order.

While Atwood was not an entrant in the meet here, an arrangement was made with him by which he will begin the second lap of his air journey to New York and Boston as the first event of the afternoon program.

Atwood declared today that if he made the St. Louis-New York-Boston flight in safety he would soon essay a flight from San Francisco to New York, for which a prize of $50,000 has been offered.

Atwood left St. Louis at 8:05 a. m. Monday and landed in Chicago, 286 miles away (estimated), at 6:19 p. m. His total time, counting the delays occasioned by two stops at Springfield, Ill., and Pontiac, Ill., was 10h. 14m.; but his actual time in the air, computed by deducting the delays, was 5h. 43m.

The aviator believes he has set a pace which will result in his establishing a new record on his long flight to the coast.

STATEHOOD IS VETOED, MR. TAFT SEEING IN IT MENACE TO JUDICIARY

Arizona Recall Provision Is Denounced as Destructive of the Independence of Men on the Bench

POLITICS MAY RULE

President Explains That Judges Should Be Left Free to Decide Regardless of Desire of the Majority

WASHINGTON—President Taft sent to Congress today his message vetoing the resolution admitting Arizona and New Mexico to statehood, basing his objection on the provision in the Arizona constitution making the judiciary subject to the recall, which he called "pernicious and destructive of free government."

"I return herewith without my approval the House joint resolution to admit the territories of New Mexico and Arizona as states," says the President. "If I sign this resolution I do not see how I can escape responsibility for the judicial recall of the Arizona constitution. This provision of the Arizona constitution, in its application to county and state judges seems to me so pernicious in its effect, so destructive of independence in the judiciary, so likely to subject the rights of the individual to the possible tyranny of a popular majority and, therefore, to be so injurious to the cause of free government that I must disapprove a constitution containing it."

"Now, as the government is for all the people and not solely for a majority of them, the majority in exercising control, either directly or through its agents, is bound to exercise the power for the benefit of the minority as well as the majority. But all have recognized that the majority of a people, unrestrained by law, when aroused and without the sobering effect of delibera-

DEMOCRATS PLAN STATE TICKET FOR THE FALL CAMPAIGN

Augustus L. Thorndike of Brewster, a Boston hotel man, is favored by many of the leading Democrats of the state for state treasurer and Joseph A. Plouff of Ware for auditor, according to a statement today by one who is in close touch with the Democratic state committee.

For attorney-general, it was said that the choice lies between Harvey N. Shepard and George W. Anderson, both of Boston.

Mr. Thorndike was the Democratic nominee for the state Senate from the cape district against Senator John E. White, now state auditor. Mr. Thorndike made what was considered by many Democrats an exceptionally good contest in that Republican district. It is said that his choice as candidate for state treasurer will meet with approval among Democrats throughout the state.

Harvey N. Shepard was the Democratic candidate for attorney-general two years ago, when James H. Vahey was the candidate for Governor.

With the announcement of new candidates today the Democratic state ticket, as many leading Democrats desire it, appears at the election in November, assumes tangible shape. It is as follows: For Governor Eugene N. Foss of Boston, for Lieutenant-Governor, David L. Walsh of Pittsfield, secretary of state, Edward O. Skelton or Frank J. Donahay, both of Boston; state treasurer, Augustus L. Thorndike of Brewster; for auditor and receiver-general, Joseph A. Plouff of Ware; for attorney-general, Harvey N. Shepard or George W. Anderson, both of Boston.

SEEK TO ADJOURN CONGRESS WEEK FROM TODAY

WASHINGTON — Senator Penrose (Rep., Pa.), introduced a concurrent resolution in the Senate today proposing that Congress adjourn at 2 p. m. on Aug. 22.

Mr. Cummins of Iowa objected, declaring that the insurgents would not consent to adjournment until action had been taken on the tariff bills.

The resolution was sent to the committee on appropriations and efforts will be made to get the insurgents into line.

Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee says that Congress will probably not get through before Wednesday of next week.

would be ordered immediately and would be run as frequently as traffic warranted. He added that the company was expending $645,000 in abolishing grade crossings, $507,000 putting wires underground, $121,250 in bridge improvements, within the next three or four years.

New power plants, new rolling stock and other equipment to the extent of $1,827,800 would soon be necessary, said Mr. Warren, and it would be for the board to decide whether or not these were more important than the improvements urged. The railway officials submitted figures to show that the line rarely paid expenses.

Charles T. Warren of the Malden Board of Trade said that Malden business men could not get revenue trade on account of the bad transportation.

F. S. Elwell, who represents the Malden citizens at the hearing, proved by witnesses that the proposed automatic signal service which the railroad desires to put in, instead of double tracks, was installed six years ago and found to be unsatisfactory. Witnesses were questioned by the chairman of the board in regard to light and heating devices and crowding.

Representatives of the Revere Beach district attributed the slow development of beach property to the indifference of the Boston & Northern Railway Company. The hearing was adjourned until 10:30 a. m. Wednesday.

She is filled with supplies, books, oil and clothing, etc., for the Labrador missions of Dr. Grenfell.

Captain Mille commands the vessel and in addition to the regular crew she has on board W. R. Sterling of Chicago, his two daughters and several friends. Mr. Sterling has charge of the vessel for a six-weeks' cruise along the Labrador coast.

"The eagle yawned in his face. Now that was a mean advantage to take. He knew that none of us could sell that joke, as it is no good without the stage setting."

R. P. McPhee then said, "Why should not humorists be sad?"

"It's all a matter of salary," replied C. G. Garretson of the New York Globe. After trying without much success for three quarters of an hour to convert one another from "glooms" into "joys," the members adjourned to a downtown restaurant.

The most serious part of the program today for the delegates is a sail in the United States quarter-master's boat to Fort Warren this afternoon, to be followed at 7 p. m. by a dinner at the Algonquin Club in this city, where they will be guests of Gen. Charles H. Taylor of Boston. The women will visit the Shubert theater.

In spite of the efforts of the Peoria (Ill.) delegation at the Hotel Brunswick this morning, the majority of the visiting humorists were found to be pledged to Detroit for the convention city next year. The election will be held on the quarter-master's boat while going down the harbor this afternoon and it is regarded by some as certain that Newton Newkirk of Boston, present secretary-treasurer, will be elected to the presidency and that Edward Guest of Detroit will be elected secretary.

He already appears to have broken the American record for a single day flight.

The best previous American record was made by Atwood himself when he flew 148 miles from Atlantic City to Baltimore on July 10, 1911. The best international cross country record is held by Andre Beaumont, who in the Paris-Rome contest covered 401 miles in a single day, but in this instance he made three landings, while Atwood landed only twice between start and finish.

Atwood's descent into Chicago was thrilling. Sailing in from the southwest, a lone speck in the clouds, he made direct for the downtown district, and for a time hovered unnoticed in the distance over the skyscrapers. Thousands of people were crowded at the lakefront intent upon the flights of the aeroplanes competing in the aviation contests. Atwood appeared on the scene as a stranger, unheralded and expected only by a few.

Suddenly the crowd noticed the oncoming stranger and a voice shouted: "That's Atwood from St. Louis."

Immediately the vast assembly was in an uproar. Two or three of the airmen sailed out to meet Atwood.

Coming steadily onward Atwood steered over the aviation field and circled around it while some of the machines listed in the meet followed behind as an escort. Once around Atwood descended gracefully, touching the ground for the first time since his stop at Pontiac, Ill., 91 miles from Chicago.

When Mr. Atwood stepped from his biplane enthusiastic thousands swept policemen and guardsmen aside in their rush to the field. In their lead was Harold F. McCormick, the wealthy patron of aviation. The officials of the meet were as enthusiastic as the smallest urchin who tried to scramble over the wire fence.

Lifting Mr. Atwood from his perch on the aeroplane they held him up to the full view of the crowd. The grandstands were a gesticulating, screaming mass. Then a triumphant march was begun to the officials' stand, the aviator borne on the shoulders of Mr. McCormick and other enthusiasts.

His first stop on Monday's trip was made at Springfield, Ill., 98 miles from St. Louis, after a 2h. 25m. flight. He was scheduled to stop at Bloomington, Ill., but the crowds assembled at his proposed landing place there were so dense he could not find clear space enough to land in, so he swept low and, nodding his head negatively at the people, continued. At Pontiac he descended to replenish his supply of gasoline and lubricating oil.

"After cutting across the south end of Lake Michigan," he said, in outlining his course for today, "I will follow the Lake Shore railroad into Elkhart, Ind., where I expect to arrive at 6:20 o'clock this evening. I will spend the night at Elkhart and will start from there for Toledo at 8:30 or 9 o'clock Wednesday morning. I expect to reach Toledo at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and will stop Wednesday at Sandusky. I will leave Sandusky for Cleveland on Thursday morning. Unless my plans fail, I will spend Thursday night in Cleveland."

Oscar A. Brindley and Walter Beatty went after the altitude record for the third day of the meet and remained out of sight most of the afternoon. When the meet closed Brindley could be seen high in the clouds. He did not descend until dark.

The following were the results in the third day's events at the meet: Twelve-mile speed contest for monoplanes—Won by Earle Ovington, time 13m. 31s.; Rene Simon second, 13m. 33.1-5s.; Tom Sopwith third, 13m. 34-5s.

Fastest lap in monoplane race, 11-3 miles—Won by Earle Ovington, time 1m. 27.44s.

Starting event—Won by John J. Frisbie, left earth in 88ft. 3in.; Andrew Drew second, 91ft.; J. C. Turpin third, 91ft. 6in.

Fourteen-mile cross-water event for monoplanes and biplanes—Won by Tom Sopwith, time 17m. 8.31s.

PLAN WELCOME FOR ATWOOD ON FINISH IN BOSTON

When Harry N. Atwood, on his flight from St. Louis to Boston is sighted from the Harvard-Boston aviation field during the meet beginning Aug. 26 a number of aviators will take wing and escort him to the grounds. On landing the Boston Aviation Society will present to him a silver cup in honor of his first cross-country flight on June 19 last, when he flew from the Metz field at Waltham to Lowell, to Nashua, N. H., to Manchester, N. H., to Concord, N. H., and to Lake Winnepesaukee, taking up a new passenger at each of the cities mentioned.

President Taft will be invited to the field at Atlantic on the opening day, and as he will be in Quincy on that day to witness the launching of a battleship at Fore River, it is highly probable that he will be on the aviation field when Atwood arrives.

Another aviator, Hal Pine of Garden City, L. I., entered for the coming Harvard-Boston meet yesterday. He is going to fly a Bleriot monoplane and desires to be entered for the Globe $10,000 cross-country and interstate flight on Labor day against Grahame-White, Weymann, Tabuteau, Sopwith, Ovington, Martin, Arthur B. Stone and others.

CANADA'S ELECTION STRUGGLE BEGUN BY SIR WILFRID LAURIER

A special despatch to the Boston Financial News from Ottawa, Ont., says:

OTTAWA, Ont.—The electoral battle which is to decide the fate of the proposed reciprocity agreement between the Dominion of Canada and the United States begins in earnest today when the premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, opens a five weeks' speech-making tour at Simcoe, Norfolk county, Ontario.

On Wednesday the premier will go east, speaking at Three Rivers on Thursday and at Quebec on Saturday. From Aug. 20 to 26 the premier will address a series of meetings in the Montreal district, after which he will go to the maritime provinces for a week, speaking, among other places, at St. John, N. B., Halifax, N. S., Digby, New Glasgow, Charlottetown and Moncton.

He will then return to the province of Ontario for a series of meetings lasting until Sept. 9 and during the following week he will speak at various points in Quebec province. The premier is expected to wind up his campaign with a meeting at Ottawa.

R. L. Borden, the opposition leader, has also arranged to devote the bulk of his attention to the maritime provinces and Quebec in the hope of weakening the predominance which the Liberal party has so long enjoyed in these provinces.

ADMIRAL TOGO TAKES A SIGHT-SEEING TRIP IN CITY OF NEW YORK

NEW YORK—More sight-seeing was the program for Admiral Togo today. He was first taken to the Brooklyn navy yard and there given an opportunity to look over some of Uncle Sam's biggest sea fighters. He was then whisked back to Manhattan over the Brooklyn bridge, in which he displayed unusual interest the night he landed, and it was planned to take him through the Hudson river tubes and show him other wonders of the metropolis.

Tonight he will be the guest of honor at a banquet at the Nippon Club. Wednesday he will be the guest of General Grant at Governors island, prior to his departure at 5:30 P. M. for Boston.

Peace was the theme at a luncheon given in honor of Admiral Togo at the Hotel Astor, Monday, by the Japan Society of New York and the Peace Society at which more than 600 citizens were present.

After the luncheon, Lindsay Russell, president of the Peace Society, read a cable from Andrew Carnegie as follows: "Cordial greetings to Togo, great warrior and now great peacemaker. May success crown his noble efforts to bind Japan's first friend, our own beloved country, and his in bonds of friendliest peace."

The message came from Skibo castle and was received with great applause. At the guest table, besides Admiral Togo were J. Franklin Fort, former Governor of New Jersey; Commander Higaro, Hamilton Holt, James Brown Scott, Consul General K. Midzuno, Major General F. D. Grant, Mayor Gaynor, Lindsay Russell, Commander Taniguchi, Rear Admiral Leutze, Robert M. Thompson, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, Chandler Hale, third assistant secretary of state; General Verbeke, William Frederick Dix, Police Commissioner Rhinelander Waldo and Capt. T. M. Potts. Mayor Gaynor presided.

In assuming the position of presiding officer, Mayor Gaynor recalled the famous Perry treaty with Japan, which was made in 1853, and stated that since that time the greatest possible friendship had existed between the two nations and expressed his hope and belief that such would continue. Continuing, he said: "This has been the constant policy of our government and it is the object of the Japan Society of New York, to co-operate in its maintenance by fostering and developing the friendly sentiment which now exists between these two great people by advocating treaties, encouraging commerce and by extending hospitality to distinguished visitors from Japan."

At the conclusion of the mayor's talk, Mr. Russell called for a toast to the Emperor of Japan, after which Togo proposed a toast to the President of the United States.

After being formally presented by the mayor, Admiral Togo addressed his hearers in Japanese, his short talk being translated by Commander Taniguchi in part as follows:

My name, Heihachiro Togo, possesses a particular significance at this time. "Heihachiro" means "peaceful son" and "Togo" means "eastern country." Hence, I am a peaceful man of the East. "I contented therefore that the name by which I was christened entitles me to address you on terms of intimacy, and it gives me much pleasure to learn that that function has been given by the Japan Society in conjunction with the Peace Society."

NATIONAL QUARTER AND FANCY DIVING ARE FOR LABOR DAY

Postponed From Next Saturday in Order to Accommodate a Number of the Best Swimmers in Country

EXPECT FINE FIELD

NEW YORK—In order to accommodate some of the candidates for the national aquatic outdoor championships, the New York Athletic Club has decided to postpone the contests for the 440 yards and fancy diving titles scheduled to take place at Traverse Island on Aug. 19, and will hold them instead, on Labor day. On account of the change the two events in question will probably bring together the best fields ever seen in this country.

For the quarter-mile race there are promised the entries of George Hodgson, of the Montreal A. A., the young Canadian who recently created such a sensation abroad by defeating the champions of England; M. R. Ritter, of the City A. C., of New York, formerly of Germany and now holder of three Canadian titles; Richard Frizell, the speedy sprinter who swam within six inches of Daniels last winter at 100 yards; Zoltan Tobias, once champion of Austria; L. B. Goodwin, of the New York A. C., the half-mile American holder; his clubmates, James Reilly and Nicholas Nerich, who have been swimming within seconds of Ritter and Goodwin; S. Cedar, a newcomer—who is fast rounding into championship form, and several other fast middle-distance men. Hodgson is the favorite and expected to better C. M. Daniels' open water record of 5 m. 54.2-55.3; but he will have to be at his best to win. Some of the New Yorkers are also likely to swim below Daniels' figures.

The fancy diving contest for America's supreme title will have an even better field than was anticipated. George Gaidick, of the Chicago A. A., will be on hand to defend the title which he won last year. Against him will start Kurt Behrens, of Germany, now wearing the colors of the City A. C. of New York; Arthur McAleney, Walter Lee and Frank Muller; Harold Smyth and E. G. Schaal of Philadelphia. Behrens, it may be remembered, defeated Gaidick at the Olympic games of 1908, in England, and was runner up to Johansen. It will be interesting to see how the two compare now. McAleney is the present metropolitan champion, and recently won from Behrens in the Canadian championships. Smyth has in the past won titles both in England and Australia, and last summer placed second to Gaidick, beating McAleney. Schaal was also awarded a decision over McAleney in Philadelphia last January.

Judging from these records there is not much to choose between the lot. A more evenly balanced group of fancy divers was never assembled, and a wonderful exhibition should be witnessed when these men fight it out for the championship.

There were four matches in the first round played Monday morning and all were decided in straight sets with the exception of one. All of the pairs have entered the tournament at scratch with the exception of Mrs. Barger Wallace and Craig Biddle, who give the others a handicap of 15. The summary: Miss Anna Sands and Charles E. Sands defeated Mrs. Ernest Iselin and Francis Roche, 6-2, 6-0.

Miss Gordon Douglas and Herbert M. Harriman defeated Mrs. E. S. Reynal and B. de R. Cruger, 6-1, 6-1.

NATIONAL ROQUE TOURNAMENT STARTS AT NORWICH, CONN.

Over 30 Experts Begin Play Today in Thirtieth Annual Meeting of National Association

NORWICH, Conn.—Over 30 experts, representing roque clubs throughout the eastern and middle states assembled on the courts here for the opening of the thirtieth annual tournament of the National Roque Association. Monday was spent in practice and arranging schedules.

Charles C. Cox of East Boston, the undefeated national champion, will arrive tonight to try to regain the title from Champion Bosworth of New London. W. L. Robinson and E. W. Robinson of Mansfield, Mass., and S. E. Barrett of South Weymouth, Mass., are here.

Professor Jacobus, former Champion Edward Clark, both of Springfield, S. B. Prentice, J. D. Minor of Providence, Denison Cowles of Brattleboro, the Rev. L. M. Flock of Williamstown, make up the New England representatives, while Philadelphia and Washington have large delegations, and Chicago and Kingston, N. Y., have experts here for the tournament.

At 9:30 this morning the tournament was formally opened by Mayor C. F. Thayer, who started the balls rolling.

All the leading players are in fine condition and playing strong games.

LOW SCORES IN GOLF AT OMAHA

OMAHA, Neb.—The preliminary round of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Association's tournament resulted in some of the lowest scores ever recorded for the tourney. With 113 pairs in the first flight, nine men turned in scores below 80, and those below 85 were more than 40. This indicates a qualifying score of about 170.

Blaine Young of Omaha was lowest for Monday's 18 holes, with 72. R. W. Hodge of Oklahoma had 75 and Harry Legg, the present cup holder, turned in 76. The first 32 high scores enter the championship, the second 32 the president's cup match and the third 32 the directors' cup match.

The second flight of the preliminary round started this forenoon.

TENNIS FOR TITLE OF ESSEX COUNTY

NEWBURYPORT—The ninth annual open tennis tournament for the championship of Essex county will be held at the Oldtown Country Club of Newbury, beginning Friday, Sept. 1. The new Bernheimer cup was won last year for the first time by Charles R. Currier of the Noanett Tennis Club. The winner this year will challenge Mr. Currier.

There will be a doubles tournament in connection with the other events. Prizes will be given to the winner and runner-up in singles and to the winning team in doubles. Entries close with Laurence P. Dodge of 20 Fruit street, this city, on Thursday, Aug. 31.

BOSTONS BUY CUBAN INFILDER

NEW BRITAIN, Conn.—Cabrera, a Cuban shortstop of the New Britain team, has been sold by J. J. Murphy, the owner, to the Boston Nationals, and Ryan, an outfielder, to the St. Louis Nationals. John Reigel, pitcher for the New Haven team, has been sold to the Cleveland Americans. The price paid is said to be $3000, with a pitcher and a catcher to be given in exchange as well. Reigel will finish the season with New Haven.

NATIONAL RIFLE TOURNAMENT STARTS AT CAMP PERRY

Two Hundred and Forty-Six Sharpshooters Take Part in Opening Event With Captain Van Auken Leading

CAMP PERRY, O.—The twenty-ninth annual matches of the National Rifle Association of America opened here Monday to continue through Aug. 21.

Two hundred and forty-six sharpshooters took the butts at 8 o'clock in the initial event, 20 shots at 1000 yards, for the Wimbledon cup, presented by the National Rifle Association of Great Britain.

At noon Capt. Van Auken of the third Indiana regiment was in the lead with a score of 99 and Capt. Guy H. Emerson of Ohio, who won last year, second with a score of 98. Capt. Van Auken's score is under protest.

The enlisted men's team match, a new contest this year for teams of six, which began in the morning at 600 yards, was continued in the afternoon at 1000 yards.

The individual rapid fire match, won last year by D. A. Dixon, United States infantry, brought out 294 contestants. A dozen possibles were scored, which are to be shot off.

The Governor's match, which was transferred this year from the Ohio Rifle Association to the National Rifle Association program, started in the afternoon on the skirmish field with 271 teams competing.

The National Rifle Association announced that Gov. Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey has offered the Sea Girl range for Sept. 11 for the proposed United States-Canadian match for the Palma trophy. The association has asked the Canadians if the date will be agreeable. They prefer Sea Girl rather than Camp Perry.

BASEBALL PICKUPS

It is expected that Cobb will be back in the Detroit lineup within a week. The team misses his batting and running greatly.

Walsh pitched a great game for Chicago against Detroit yesterday, allowing but one scratch hit and not letting a man reach second.

The Boston Americans play the last game of their present series with Philadelphia in Mount Park today before going West on their last swing around that circuit for 1911.

McDonald, the new third-baseman of the Boston Nationals is a very promising player. A little more experience in the big league should find him able to hold his own in fast company.

Those who have watched Donlin play lately are unanimous in the opinion that he will fast regain his old-time batting form. He is working hard all the time and is hitting the ball hard.

McKee is playing a great game at first for Pittsburgh and promises to occupy that position permanently. This has been the only weak spot in the Pittsburgh lineup for some time.

The Boston Nationals put up a great uphill contest against Brooklyn yesterday and made it three out of four for the present series. Last chance today and the prospects of making it four out of five seem very bright.

BROWN UNIVERSITY FOOTBALL COACHES AFTER NEW MATERIAL

Many Vacancies Will Have to Be Filled in This Year's Eleven—After Freshman Possibilities

HAS HARD SCHEDULE

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The Brown University football coaches and officials are busy just at present trying to get a line on the likely freshmen who are expected to enter Brown next month, and who will be available for the football squads. Several of last season's regular men will return, probably before college opens, to start practice, but there are a number of very important positions which will have to be filled either from the ranks of the substitutes or from the freshman class.

It is likely that several "practise" games may be added to the schedule, as the majority of those already scheduled are for Saturdays. It has been the custom for Brown to meet several of the smaller college teams on Wednesdays, and this custom will probably be continued this year although the Wednesday games have not been arranged yet.

Unfortunately for the local football followers, the game on Thanksgiving day with Carlisle is the only big one which Brown will play in this city. Harvard, Yale and Pennsylvania will be played, but each of these games will be out of town.

The season opens Sept. 30 with the game against New Hampshire State College and it will come to an end with the Carlisle game Nov. 30. Although there have been several old teams dropped from the Brown schedule the big games come on practically the same relative dates that they did last season, although the entire season is one week earlier.

Norwich University has been dropped and Colgate gives way to Bowdoin. Yale was unable to arrange her schedule so she could come here to play and the two year agreement signed last year with Pennsylvania compels Brown to go to that city. For that reason none of the "big four" will be met in this city.

Coach Robinson and J. D. Pryor, assistant coach, will have a hard time filling the places left vacant by the graduation of last year's captain, J. R. McKay, Smith, Sisson, Young, Bingham and High. Capt. W. E. Sprackling of Cleveland O., who for three years has been the star quarterback, will of course return to head his team. He will be the only player in the backfield who was a regular last season. Captain Sprackling is considered one of the best quarterbacks of any college and was chosen for the all-American team last season.

G. M. Crowther, substitute quarterback, will return this fall and it is believed he will be made a halfback when not relieving Captain Sprackling at quarter. Crowther is a sure catcher and a fast runner, with great ability to dodge those who attempt to tackle him. He is small, and therefore fast on his feet.

W. H. Marble of Worcester seems to be a likely veteran to take a place on the line, but in view of the apparent weakness in the backfield he will probably try out at fullback during the first practice.

S. S. Bean of Woburn was a substitute backfield player last year, as a freshman, and it is expected that he will this year develop into a first-string halfback or possibly fullback.

O. M. Kratz of Philadelphia was not eligible last year on account of studies, but he trained with the squad and showed up well enough. He will probably be eligible this season and should make a good lineman. D. H. Kulp of Pottstown, Pa., may be another lineman, as he has had experience with the varsity team although he was not eligible last year because of studies.

J. S. Goldberg of New York stands a good chance of being placed at center, a position for which he substituted for Sisson last year. He is a good lineman for anywhere except end.

V. C. Gelb of this city, who weighs about 200 pounds, but who has never played on a varsity team, may be given the place formerly held by Smith, at guard. He is fast on his feet as well as heavy. A. E. Bartlett of Boston, Brown's all-round athlete, will without doubt make a position on the team as a lineman.

E. E. Warner of West Fitchburg and W. H. Snell of Brockton may develop into capable backs but H. M. Jones, a fullback who was not eligible last season, appears to be a leader, among the new men. Jones comes from McKeesport, Pa. The schedule follows:

Sept. 30—New Hampshire State at Providence.
Oct. 4—Rhode Island State at Providence.
Oct. 11—Massachusetts Agricultural College at Providence.
Oct. 18—Bordoin at Providence.
Oct. 25—Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.
Nov. 1—Harvard at Cambridge.
Nov. 4—Tufts at Providence.
Nov. 11—Yale at New Haven.
Nov. 18—Vermont at Providence.
Nov. 25—Trinity at Providence.
Nov. 30—Carlisle at Providence.

M. E. M'LOUGHLIN WINS NEW YORK TENNIS SINGLES

Defeats T. R. Pell Easily and Is First Western Player to Get Name on the Trophy

NEW YORK—M. E. McLoughlin of the Pacific coast is the singles lawn tennis champion of this state today, following his victory over T. R. Pell in the final round on the courts of the Crescent Athletic Club, Monday, in three sets out of four, 6-1, 6-8, 6-2, 8-6. McLoughlin is the first player from the West to have his name engraved on the challenge cup.

The play was not so very sensational, but it was great tennis in places, that is, when McLoughlin cared to warm up to spells of smashing. He was steady all the way, and though he seemingly let slip some chances for points he did very little wrong during the entire match.

Though there were some long-drawn-out rallies afterward, the battle was really fought in the first set, where McLoughlin showed at his best. Before the gallery had well taken their seats he had the tally at 5-0. He came to the net for every slash where he saw a chance, and he was so accurate and full of speed that Pell could only get one game.

Ever afterward Pell seemed a trifle shy of a short range engagement at the net, and he depended upon his long drive from the region of the base-line. The points for the sets were 28-16, 41-42, 27-15, 39-35.

ST. PAUL GETS FLYNN AGAIN

MILWAUKEE—John Flynn, former St. Paul first baseman and captain, will join the team at Kansas City tomorrow morning. Manager M. J. Kelley of the St. Paul club made this announcement. Flynn was sold by Manager Kelley to the Pittsburgh club at the close of 1909 season for $4000.

REPLY OF GERMANY TO U. S. IS FAVORABLE TO A PEACE TREATY

WASHINGTON—Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, presented to the state department on Monday the reply of Germany to the proposition for a general arbitration treaty with the United States and while it was not, of course, made public, it is said today by those who have examined it that the reply is distinctly favorable to the principles laid down by Secretary Knox and to the negotiation of a treaty with Germany similar to the pending conventions with Great Britain and France, provided the United States Senate does not drastically amend those agreements.

Count von Bernstorff returned to Washington from Manchester, Mass., the summer home of the German embassy, for the purpose of conveying his government's answer. He will confer with Secretary Knox today.

All previous efforts to negotiate an arbitration treaty with Germany have failed because of the necessity to refer the question of arbitration to the Senate in each case in controversy.

It was alleged that a treaty would bind Germany absolutely to arbitrate, while the United States was bound only on condition of the Senate's approval. It is understood that Germany's objection on this score will be met by a clause in the proposed treaty, contained also in the British and French conventions, providing that disputes shall be arbitrated under special agreements in each case and the special agreements shall be binding only when confirmed by the two governments by an exchange of notes.

This will give the German emperor as well as the Senate an opportunity to ratify the special agreements.

GERMANY SAID TO FAVOR PACT

BERLIN—According to a statement by the Berliner Zeitung Am Mittag the signing of a German-American arbitration treaty may be expected in the near future along the lines of the treaties between England and France and America.

It is hinted that Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador at Washington, has been notified that the government is willing to accept the treaty in principle.

ALDRICH MONEY BOARD GIVEN TO JAN. 8 TO QUIT

WASHINGTON—The national monetary commission, headed by Nelson W. Aldrich, former senator of Rhode Island, once the Republican leader of the Senate, must wind up its affairs by Jan. 8, 1912, if the House takes favorable action on the measure passed by the Senate on Monday limiting the commission to that date.

Action followed criticism in the Senate over the commission's delay in making a report and its alleged extravagance. The Senate passed a substitute for the Cummins resolution which would have terminated the commission's life Dec. 5, by a vote of 56 to 6.

Members of the commission, who are also members of the House, will probably offer little opposition to the resolution.

NEW POLICY IN TURKEY TO CAUSE CABINET CHANGE

LONDON—A Constantinople dispatch reports that the present cabinet will resign as a result of a complete change in the internal policy.

The dispatch declares that where internal policies is concerned it has been decided to effect a rapprochement of the Moslems in the various non-Turkish nations, whether they be Christian or otherwise; an agreement has been reached between the government and the Greek, Bulgarian and Armenian patriarchs in accordance with the demands put forward by the patriarchs of the three countries.

In external politics the government will repudiate any attempts of the Pan-Islamic propaganda to devote attention exclusively to political affairs or definitely ally itself with the triple entente.

Hakki Pasha, the grand vizier, will be replaced by Kutsuk Said Pasha, who will form an exclusively Young Turk cabinet. The change, however, will not take place until after the general congress of the union and progress committee of the Young Turks, about the middle of September.

BUILDING OF NAVY SOUGHT BY CITY

ST. JOHN, N. B.—In an effort to secure the location of the plant for the construction of the new Canadian navy in this city, the city council will hold a conference Wednesday with representatives of the British shipbuilding concern which it is anticipated will receive the contract for the warships.

At that time a financial offer will be discussed. It is understood that the firm is in favor of St. John as a location for its yards.

SAVING ALASKA SEAL HERD

WASHINGTON—Suspension of taking all fur seals on the seal islands of Alaska for 15 years to avert the threatened destruction of that herd is recommended in a resolution introduced by Representative Rothermel of Pennsylvania.

PLAYHOUSE NEWS

"WILDFIRE"
"Wildfire," the comedy successfully produced by Lillian Russell a few years ago, was presented Monday at the Majestic theater, by the Lindsay Morison stock company. The play though slight, and at times tiresome with too much purely stable and legislative talk, is generally entertaining, and has a number of tense situations. Many of the cast were given opportunities to display their special talents in acting.

The race track flavor strongly permeates the play, and the vocabulary of the listener is sure to be enriched by additions of amusing slang idioms with which the dialogue abounds. The play is excellent in structure, in so far as it sticks to its race track theme, and develops that in a full manner. The scenes are laid at Hempstead, Long Island.

Miss Eleanor Gordon was attractive and effective as Mrs. Henrietta Barrington, owner of Wildfire, the part taken by Miss Lillian Russell, in the original production. Her descriptive speech in the stable, in the second act, and the scenes leading to the conclusion of that act were her best achievements. She was excellently assisted by Wilson Melrose, as John Garrison, "a lover of horses," a rival to Fred Sanderson, an automobile enthusiast, played by Russell Randall.

The rivalry between the two suitors is morally the finest thread of plot in the play, and at the end, when Sanderson finds he has won unfairly, though through no fault of his own, and explains the situation and gives up the widow, the house approved in a hearty applause.

Mrs. George A. Hibbard as the negress maid interested the audience. One of the traits which her friends are hoping to see, as an evidence of real progress in the histrionic art, is somewhat more abandon in her movements, a smoothing out of the stiff jerky style which stands in the way of true characterization.

James A. Bliss was comical as Matt Donovan, the trainer. He fairly oozed good humor. William DeWolf was John Duffy, the heavy villain bookmaker, and gave a painstaking performance. Rock-cliffe Fellows, as Bertie Almsworth, the affected Englishman, had several amusing verbal tiffs with Mr. Melrose, which seemed impromptu. Denny Deleau, as Bud, the stable boy captured the audience with his clever work.

Next week, "Old Jed Prouty."

B. F. KEITH'S

Charles Richman and company are at B. F. Keith's vaudeville theater this week in "The Fire Escape." The farce relates the amusing predicament of a young man caught in his hotel room during an alarm of fire while all his outer clothing is at the tailors being pressed. The fire escape for that floor is entered from his room, and an excited young lady rushes in. She is the young man's sweetheart, in manner somewhat distant. The fun arises from their sentimental agitations, the necessity to get out on account of the alarm and their reluctance to do so because of the incompleteness of their costumes. The comedy is kept at a brisk pace by the expert Mr. Richman and pretty Miss Antoinette Walker as the girl. Charles Siller was natural as a pert bell boy.

Gus Edwards' school boys and girls provided good vaudeville entertainment in their familiar musical comedy called "Graduation Day." Will Rogers exhibited his skill with the lariat in rope tricks and dancing, and proved quite a humorist as well. Carl McCullough gave several fair imitations and one of Warfield that was very poor. Melville and Higgins do their old act, "Let It Lay," with pleasing new songs. Carroll and Cooke sing well but need songs that are funny.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

"The Girl and the Pirate," the latest musical play from the pen of Matthew Ott, opened its one week engagement yesterday in the open air theater at Norumbega park with two crowded houses. This is a mirth provoking musical play, full of continuous action, presented by a good company of all around entertainers and a pretty chorus. Heading the list is Bob Ott, who is closely pressed for popular favor by the Three Singing Jacks, Miss Ogden, late soloist with Sousa's band, Allen and Tenny, in their acrobatic dancing novelty, and Carrie Engle, musical expert.

Steamers leave Lincoln wharf almost hourly for Bass Point, Nahant. The new line from Nahant to Revere beach is well patronized.

The Castle Square theater will open for the fourth season of the John Craig Stock company Sept. 1 with "The Rose of the Rancho," the picturesque drama of old California which David Belasco produced a few years ago. Miss Mary Young will have the title role, a fine acting part, and John Craig will act the soldier-hero.

"Across the Pacific," with Harry Clay Blaney as Willie Live, will open the season at the Grand Opera house next Saturday evening and continue the following week.

At the Tremont theater next Thursday morning seats will go on sale for the opening of the new season at that house next Monday, when Bostonians will have a chance to see "Excuse Me," Rupert Hughes' Pullman "carnival," George W. Day, Frank Macklyn, Phil Stalls, Lou Hendricks, Charles Hermann, Harry Kernell, Charles Abbe, Philip White, Harry Carter, Alonzo Price, Wilfred Seagrin, Charles Baron, Geraldine O'Brien, Marjorie Skirvin, Lillie Brownell, Lydia Dickson, Isabelle Richards and Margherita Sargent will be in the cast.

The Kinemacolor pictures of the coronation began their second week in Tremont temple yesterday. They display leading episodes of that great event in action and in the colors of life. The entertainment lasts two hours. It is accompanied by music and a descriptive lecture. It is given twice a day, at 2:30 in the afternoon, and 8:15 in the evening.

HERE AND THERE

"The End of the Bridge," Miss Florence Lincoln's Harvard prize play put on last season by John Craig at the Castle Square, Boston, was acted last week at the Columbia theater, San Francisco, by Henry Miller. Mr. Miller was commended for his delicate handling of the graceful little play by the Examiner reviewer, who, however, was not greatly impressed by the play itself. He found it over full of talk about sickness and finds the character drawing of the hero-physician naive. He complains that the whole play is vague in development. Miss Henrietta McDannell, who created the role in the Craig production, is praised for her smooth performance of Peter. Henry Miller acted Mr. Craig's role. Miss Laura Hope Crews was in Miss Young's role of the heroine and Francis Byrne was commended for his acting of the lawyer. The reviewer failed to praise the fine dialogue and often deft construction of the play.

In a recent interview George M. Cohan said that he was not devoted to theatrical management nor to acting. His ambition is to "write a good play" before he is 40. He says he composes all his tunes at the piano in the key of F sharp, then has them orchestrated by a musical director.

Daniel Frohman in the New York Times Sunday said: "Never were so many real Americans attempting to write plays. Never were so many of them really succeeding. During the three months of the summer 43 manuscripts were sent to me, all by Americans; none of them quite hopeless; one of them so good that I am now rehearsing it. Look at the roster of the men whose names are on the billboards. You will find more and more Americans among them, and as the coming seasons pass the number will grow steadily."

"Play-writing is becoming, constantly, a finer and more delicate art, and that attracts men who, had it not so developed, would have clung to other methods of expression. Our writers love fineness; the old-time play was crude, then, made the more delicate appeal. Now, simple, child-like things appeal, hold audiences spell-bound; they are looking for the real and not the artificial. The young American who writes can furnish that as well as any writer in the world."

Captain Bourke tried his plan with success Monday night.

MIDSUMMER FESTIVAL IS ON IN GLOUCESTER AT STAGE FORT PARK

GLOUCESTER, Mass.—Visitors are here in large numbers to witness the midsummer festival being held today in the vicinity of Stage Fort park. A baby parade is the feature of the afternoon, together with an exhibit of the new auto chemical hose wagon, band concerts, and in the evening a fireworks display.

Prizes will be awarded in the baby parade and other events. Roy N. Berry, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will have charge of the pageant of infants. The municipal council has appointed Aldermen Montgomery and Donahoe a committee on fireworks and Aldermen Barrett and Marchant a committee on bands to serve with the committee on celebration.

The people of Gloucester claim that their locality is more than a fishing place, that a particular historical interest attaches to it. Captain Winthrop came here with a party of men in 1626, but most of the party went to Salem. Gloucester was the starting point of the Massachusetts Bay colony, which later developed into the state of Massachusetts.

EXPECT WOOL BILL TO PASS THE SENATE BEFORE DAY IS OVER

WASHINGTON—In the Senate today it is expected that the wool tariff revision bill passed by the House on Monday by a vote of 206 to 90 will be taken up and promptly passed. Thirty Republicans and one independent voted for the bill.

For this measure, which imposes a rate ad valorem duty of 29 per cent on all raw wools with corresponding reduced rates on woolen manufactures, the other two tariff measures will be side-tracked to give wool right of way to the White House for the expected veto. On the veto depends the further program of the Democrats and the progressive Republicans.

Representative Underwood, in expressing the opinion that final adjournment would not come before next week, said that he did not expect Congress to stay after the pending bills had been disposed of "unless the Senate determines to stay and act on the cotton bill."

NEW LINES OF PEACE MOVEMENT TOLD AT BERNE CONFERENCE

BERNE, Switzerland—Sending a telegram to Andrew Carnegie at Skibo castle, whose peace foundation made the gathering possible, was the final act of the peace advocates who closed their conference here Monday, having agreed upon some of the essentials to be included in a declaration of their hopes and program.

WAR SECRETARY TELLS PRESIDENT OF CANAL VISIT

WASHINGTON—Henry L. Stimson, secretary of war, returned last night to Washington after a trip of inspection to the Panama canal. He went at once to the White House, where he spent the evening reporting conditions at Panama to President Taft.

Mr. Stimson says he is pleased with things as he found them, especially in the Canal Zone.

"I was particularly surprised at the cleanliness of things in the Canal Zone," said the secretary. "Not a city in our country can surpass the zone in sanitary conditions."

"The most important piece of work that is being done at the Culebra cut just now is the shoving down of the side hills. The great weight of these hills caused the bottom of the cut to push upward. When this weight is removed, the engineers tell me, the cut will be free from further disturbance. There is no other disturbing question before the engineers and there is no question about the work being completed in the specified time."

In Porto Rico and Cuba the war secretary found conditions prosperous.

Some of the others in the saloon are Col. E. Anderson, Dr. Ada A. Achorn, Miss S. C. Armory, G. T. Andrews, Mrs. Andrews, Miss E. Andrews, Edward E. Arnold, Mrs. Arnold, S. L. BILL FOR PUBLICITY OF ELECTION FUNDS AGREED ON AT LAST

WASHINGTON—A complete agreement on the pre-election campaign publicity bill and a failure to agree upon a constitutional amendment for the direct election of senators, marked the conclusion of the conference between the House and Senate over these two measures.

The conference report on the publicity bill will be presented to both houses of Congress on Monday. The Senate amendment, limiting to an average of 10 cents a voter the amount that any candidate may spend in his campaign has been dropped from the bill.

The main reason for its elimination is said to be the decision that it would give too much apparent authority for the use of money in campaigns.

MR. BRYAN ASSAILS PRESIDENT FOR STATEHOOD VETO

CINCINNATI, Ohio—William J. Bryan here today gave out an interview attacking President Taft for his veto of the Arizona-New Mexico statehood bill. "The veto is the height of folly," said Mr. Bryan. "The statehood bill provides that the people must vote upon the recall at the first election. It leaves them free to retain it or cut it out. That is all the President has any reason to ask. Oregon now has the recall and any state in the Union can adopt it. If it is cut out entirely Arizona can reinstate the provision as soon as statehood is given her."

"The President is wasting energy when he makes such a fuss over a provision which the people are at liberty to add at any time. But his veto serves a useful purpose. It shows that the same doctrine of irresponsible government which he applied in the Philippines would be applied by him if he had the power."

SEVEN IN CONTEST FOR LEGISLATURE

READING, Mass.—Three candidates are already in the field for the Republican nomination for representative in the General Court from the twentieth Middlesex district. The Democratic party has four aspirants. The Republicans are George L. Pratt, chairman of the selectmen here; Jesse W. Morton of the school board and Henry L. Andrews, a member of the Woburn board of aldermen. The four Democratic candidates in the field are George L. Flint, chairman of the local municipal light board, and Representative Joseph H. Parker, Jr., who is up for reelection. C. Winthrop Smith of this town, a Boston and Reading lawyer, and James E. Kelley, town clerk of Wilmington.

FILE NOMINATION PAPERS

Charles E. Hatfield, chairman of the Republican state committee, filed with the secretary of state today his nomination papers for reelection to the state committee, as required by the new direct nomination law. William C. Dillingham of Malden, clerk of the courts of Middlesex county, also filed nomination papers.

STATEHOOD IS VETOED, MR. TAFT SEEING IN IT MENACE TO JUDICIARY

tion and discussion, may do injustice to the minority or to the individual when the selfish interest of the majority prompts.

"Hence arises the necessity for a constitution by which the will of the majority shall be permitted to guide the course of the government only under controlling checks that experience has shown to be necessary to secure for the minority its share of the benefit to the whole people that a popular government is established to bestow.

"The executive and legislative branches of our government are representative of the majority of the people which elected them, in guiding the course of the government within the limits of the constitution. But the judicial branch of the government is not representative of the majority of the people in any such sense, even if the mode of electing judges is by popular election.

"In a proper sense, judges are servants of the people. But they are not popular representatives. On the contrary to fill their office properly they must be independent. They must decide every question which comes before them according to law and justice.

"In early days some argued that whatever was done by the Legislature was constitutional, but it was soon settled that it was the duty of judges to apply the law and to declare what was the law and if what purported to be statutory law was at variance with the fundamental law—i.e., the constitution—the seeming statute was not law at all, was not binding on the courts, the individuals, or any branch of the government, and that it was the duty of the judges so to decide.

"This power conferred on the judiciary in our form of government is unique in the history of governments and its operation has attracted and deserved the admiration and commendation of the world. It gives to our judiciary a position higher, stronger and more responsible than that of the judiciary of any other country and more effectively secures adherence to the fundamental will of the people.

"Judges to fulfill their functions properly in our popular government, must be more independent than in any other form of government, and that need of independence is greatest where the individual is a litigant and the state, guided by the successful and governing majority is the other.

"In order to preserve our constitutional balance, we must have judges with courage to decide against the majority when law and justice require.

"Could there be a system more ingeniously devised to subject judges to momentary gusts of popular passions than this Arizona system? Controversies over elections, labor troubles, racial or religious issues, issues as to the construction or constitutionality of liquor laws, criminal trials of popular or unpopular defendants, the removal of county seats, suits by individuals to maintain their constitutional rights in obstruction of some popular improvement—these and many other cases could be cited in which a majority of the district electorate would be tempted by hasty anger to recall a conscientious judge if opportunity were open all the time.

"No period of delay is interposed for the abatement of popular feeling. The recall is devised to encourage quick action and to lead the people to strike while the iron is hot.

"Supporters of such a system seem to think that it would work only in the interest of the poor, the humble, the weak and the oppressed; that it will strike down only the judge who is supposed to favor corporations and be effected by the corrupting influence of the rich. Nothing could be further from the ultimate result. The motive it would offer to unscrupulous combinations to seek to control politics in order to control the judges is clear.

"Those would profit by the recall who have the best opportunity of arousing the majority of the people to action on a sudden impulse. Do they not include those who have money enough to employ firebrands and slanders in a community and the stirrers up of social hate?

"Would not self-respecting men well hesitate to accept judicial office with such a sword of Damocles hanging over them? What kind of judgments might those on the unpopular side expect from courts whose judges must make their decisions under such legalized terrorism? The character of the judges would deteriorate to that of trimmers and time-servers, and independent judicial action would be a thing of the past.

"As the possibilities of such a system pass in review is it too much to characterize it as one which would destroy the judiciary, its standing, its usefulness?

"It is said the recall will be rarely used. If so, it will be rarely needed. Then why adopt a system so full of danger? But it is a mistake to suppose that such a powerful lever for influencing judicial decisions and such an opportunity for vengeance because of adverse ones will be allowed to remain unused.

"But it is said that the people of Arizona are to become an independent state when created and even if we strike out judicial recall now they can incorporate it in their constitution after statehood.

"To this I would answer that in dealing with the courts which are the cornerstones of good government and in which not only the voters, but the non-voters and non-residents have a deep in-

SENATE GIVES OUT REPORT OPPOSING THE PEACE PACTS

WASHINGTON—Direct opposition to the attitude taken by President Taft was manifested in a report of the Senate foreign relations committee made public this afternoon, explaining its action in recommending amendment of the Anglo-American and Franco-American arbitration treaties.

"To take from the Senate, in any degree, or by any means, the power of saying whether a given question is one for arbitration or not is to destroy the power of the Senate on the most important point to be decided in connection with differences arising with any other nation," the report says. "Even if it were constitutional, to deprive the Senate to this extent of their share in the treaty making power would be most unwelcome and perilous."

"The committee recommends to the Senate the approval of the enlarged scope for arbitration purposes proposed in article 1, but it declines to admit that the destruction of the constitutional powers of the Senate is necessary to the promotion of peace and arbitration, or that their maintenance diminishes by a hair's breadth the enlarged scope which these treaties propose for arbitration as the true method for the settlement of international controversies."

"In approving article 1 of the treaty," the report continues, "the committee assents to the arbitration of all questions coming within the rule there prescribed. The terms in which the rule is stated, are however, quite vague and indefinite, and they are altogether new in international proceedings."

"Under these circumstances to vest in an outside commission the power to say finally what the treaty means by its very general and indefinite language is to vest in that commission the power to make for us an arrangement entirely different from that which we supposed ourselves to be making."

"To take away from the Senate the determination of the most important question in a proposed treaty of arbitration is necessarily in violation of the treaty provisions of the constitution."

EDITORIAL COMMENTS

THE selected editorial comments today deal with the prospect of the signing by President Taft of the tariff bill.

MILWAUKEE FREE PRESS—If President Taft does not veto any wool revision bill that may be passed at this session of Congress it will be for reasons that cannot now be fathomed. . . . President Taft, like all true and consistent Republican tariff reformers, has long been committed to the principle of . . . piecemeal revision. He wants the tariff taken out of politics. He wants an end of tariff-making by log-rolling, by self-interest and by ignorance. He wants it based . . . on the facts and figures gathered by expert and disinterested investigators.

NEW YORK PRESS—We have no idea that Democrats and insurgents who enact tariff legislation merely with the notion of having it meet a White House veto will gain much credit for themselves, much less accomplish their purpose of "putting President Taft in a hole."

BALTIMORE SUN—If Mr. Taft does veto the bill, he will probably base his action on the fact that the tariff board has not yet reported the result of its inquiry into the difference between the cost of manufacturing in this country and abroad. If Mr. Taft believes for a moment that the country will accept that as a valid excuse for his rejection of the bill, he is sadly deceived. He has made not a few blunders, but none that will prove so disastrous as this. . . . The country demands relief, and demands it now. Mr. Taft himself has declared the present rates "intolerable." The reductions made by both the Underwood and La Follette bills are by no means radical. They are too conservative to suit many advocates of reform.

NEW YORK JOURNAL OF COMMERCE—There is no uncertainty about President Taft's attitude on the subject, and very little doubt as to what he will do if the bill is put before him for approval. His views upon tariff reform are not very clear or very far advanced, and he is not prepared for such a step as this. He will probably refuse to be coerced or pushed forward in the dark. He has sufficient ground for explaining why, and we believe sufficient candor and courage to do so in a convincing way that will win approval of his course, or at least prevent any injury to his standing before the country.

DOVER (N. H.) DEMOCRAT—Such a course would be perfectly consistent with everything that he has ever advocated; in fact it would appear as though he must reject any such bill in order to follow out what he has expressed as his ideas. The President's attitude all along has been in favor of a revision of the woolen tariff schedule, only after the expert tariff board has reported, which will be about the first of next December.

Interest as a security for their rights of life, liberty and property, no matter what the future action of a state may be, it is necessary for the authority which is primarily responsible for its creation to assert in no doubtful tones the necessity for an independent and untrammeled judiciary."

PLANS BEING LAID FOR ENACTMENT OF NEW ANTI-TRUST ACT

WASHINGTON—Martin W. Littleton, Democratic representative from New York, has prepared and will soon introduce in the House a resolution authorizing the creation of a joint commission of Congress to study commercial and industrial conditions in the United States, with a view to the enactment of a new anti-trust law.

Mr. Littleton is convinced, after careful study of the question, that leaders of labor and representatives of "big business" should have an opportunity, through the medium of a properly authorized commission, to tell Congress just what changes if any should be made in the existing antitrust act.

Testimony has been adduced from several high sources in the last year to the effect that the commercial supremacy of the United States is threatened by the enforcement of a law that tends to prevent reasonable expansion and development. Representative Littleton argues that if the law is obstructive of progress it should be changed, and this view is gathering strength in Congress.

NEW POSTOFFICE INSPECTOR NAMED FOR NEW ENGLAND

William P. Armstrong, who has been registry envelope agent at Hartford, Conn., where the government envelope plant is located, has been appointed a postoffice inspector in the New England division.

Mr. Armstrong entered the service June 2, 1886. He was at one time auditor of the Panama canal commission, and later served as assistant general counsel of the postoffice department at Washington. Inspector Armstrong probably will be detailed to the Vermont district, and Inspector William Hurley will be transferred to this city to handle the fraud cases which were formerly taken care of by Clarahan.

FASHIONS AND THE HOUSEHOLD

FICHUS GIVE A DAINTY TOUCH

Good examples of these dress accessories

FICHUS of all sorts are exceedingly fashionable this season. They give an eminently dainty and feminine touch to the toilette and they are in every way charming. Here are two.

No. 1 is made with the sailor collar that is so well liked and with full ends that are knotted at the front. It will be found available both for one material throughout and for two materials. In this case, embroidered muslin is combined with plain, but the collar could be made of silk with ties of mull to be in the height of style.

No. 2 admits of even greater variety. It can be made just as illustrated, double with sash ends, or it can be made single and it can be cut off at the undergarment, omitting the sash. In whatever it is treated, it is becoming, graceful and much desired. Fine white net, thin mull, dainty lawns and the like are the preferred materials for this kind of thing with trimming of lace or of the same with lace banding. The sash illustrated is of a pretty pattern, but the fichus could be cut even of, if desired.

Accessories of the kind are much worn with summer frocks and a plain muslin such an addition becomes completely formed.

To make No. 1 will be required $\frac{3}{4}$ yard material 27 or 36 inches wide, $\frac{3}{4}$ yard other width for the tie ends, with yards of banding and 6 yards of lace.

No. 2 will be needed 2 yards 36 or

1 yard 44, if the under portion is seamed at the back, but if not, $1\frac{1}{4}$ yards 44 will be required, with 7 yards of banding and 7 yards of plaited ruffling or 11 yards of lace for the frills.

A pattern (7056) in one size only, can be had at any May Manton agency, or will be sent by mail. Address 132 East Twenty-third street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

VELVET AND MUSLIN COMBINED

Impression given is one of simple elegance

THE latest idea is the combination of black velvet and embroidered muslin, the velvet forming the hem of the clinging skirt and the muslin the corsage and draperies. Colored velvets are also very much worn in this connection, but nothing gives the same impression of simple elegance as black velvet of the most supple texture, and pure white muslin. It seems rather strange, says a writer for the Montreal Star, to combine velvet and muslin, but there is no accounting for the dictates of fashion, and it is certain that most charming effects are to be obtained from a mélange of the two materials. Linen and velvet are thrown together this season as freely as were the lins and satins of last summer, and on dresses of this order we often find the old-world sash introduced. This sash is passed round the waist and tied at one side toward the back, the long ends being weighted and fringed and allowed to fall almost to the hem of the dress. With black and white gowns a sash of malmaison pink satin would give a delightful effect, a cluster of pink carnations being worn at the breast, and a large black picture hat.

For afternoon wear the costume of the moment is that made of navy blue taffeta or serge silk, the skirt tight and clinging, and the little corset pouched slightly at the waist and adorned with a huge collar of lace or embroidered muslin. And the important note in such a costume as this is struck by the corsage, which appears to bear no relationship whatever to the rest of the costume. For example, a skirt and coat of raven's wing blue serge and a quaint little corsage of putty colored linen veiled in black tulle! The neck of this corsage was cut round and low and a guimpe of pale ecru net was worn. The collar of this guimpe was extremely high, and on top of it there was a narrow band of black satin, with a full bow of the same under the right ear. The whole effect was most original and charming, and the hat which accompanied the costume was a picador shape in black crin with a quantity of black and white wings set high at one side.

One of the newest ideas in the millinery world is an arrangement of bows at the back of a hat, jutting out well over the hair and giving the effect of immense wings.

That pouched bodices are returning to favor is certain, but up to the present the "pouch" effect is very subdued. Nevertheless it exists, and so do the blouses with gathered fronts drawn down into a point at the waist. The little taffeta coat is playing a very important role this summer, and how useful is this smart little garment! It need not necessarily have any connection with the costume with which it is worn, indeed it is at its best when made of black or blue corbeau silk and worn over a costume with white linen or embroidered muslin. Particularly attractive is the tight skirt of black and white striped material worn with a little coat of black taffeta.

RETURN TO CLASSIC CORSET

Materials grow more and more beautiful

UNQUESTIONABLY the corset industry has arrived at a new era. For successive seasons the tendency has been toward the development of the new figure line—which has now been attained, says the Denver Times. Every movement in corset making today is a reversion to the classic idea, the molding of the figure on natural lines and an entire getting away from the artificial. In correcting the line of the figure the corset makers have also had to correct the poise of the body.

The poise of the figure is perfectly illustrated in the classic dancing figures seen on Greek and Roman vases and in the beautiful sculptured figures famous in the history of art. The torso, correctly poised, has just the curve of a slightly drawn archer's bow. It is indescribably beautiful, and graceful as well, because it expresses action and life always and never rigidity.

Corset materials grow more and more beautiful and for the coming season a splendid variety of silk brocade and satin-faced coutil is offered. Many of the new patterns are floral; the majority are in a single tone—that is, pink, pale blue, lavender or white. Occasionally one sees a high novelty in a white ground sprinkled with a colored design in simulation of embroidery.

Owing to the present effort to make the corset as light as possible, there are certain novelties in transparent effects. These materials look something like silk bolting cloth. The filling thread, however, is twisted and crimped, giving to the surface somewhat the appearance of a granite weave. These new materials are handsome and are said to have all the qualities required for a good corset fabric.

Another great novelty is a rich brocade in fleur-de-lis pattern, on the background of which are woven narrow wavy lines in color—pink or blue—on the white ground.

The great popularity of silk serge in dress goods has resulted in the presentation of this tissue in new corset materials. These are woven with embossed figures in color and are exceptionally handsome. Silk batistes, too, are employed freely. There is quite a fancy for using materials of this character that simulate embroidery designs.

Heavy satin brocades, which are among the most expensive of corset materials, are being shown in large patterns similar to dress goods brocade. These are mostly used in pure white or pink, or in pink and white combined.

Satin-surfaced coutils are almost as handsome as the all-silk materials. These are shown in a beautiful variety of patterns, the tendency being toward the large effects.

DINNER FAVORS

While the demand for dinner favors in summer is not nearly so large as in the winter months, there are some very attractive novelties now to be had, which the hostess is picking up and putting aside against future occasions, says the Newark News. In china there are wreath-garlanded wheelbarrows, very tiny indeed; baby grand pianos, quite true to life, and bridal slippers. In the paper novelties there are suitcases plaided with pasters from cities all over the globe, and tiny fruit hampers. The airship holds away, too, miniature aeroplanes of many kinds being seen. Other novelties are gas ranges, desk 'phones and beach chairs.

FLANNEL BLAZERS

Flannel for blazers, which are to be worn much the next two months for tennis or golf, increase in variety, according to the Newark News. The girl who wishes to show her allegiance to any college may select a flannel with the combination of colors she favors.

TRIED RECIPES

SPICED GRAPE

PICK over, wash and remove stems from five pounds of grapes. Mix four pounds of brown sugar with one tablespoonful, each, of cinnamon and cloves. Add two cupfuls of vinegar, bring to the boiling point and add grapes. Let simmer until skins are soft.

SPICED PLUMS

Wipe five pounds of plums and prick each four or five times with a needle. To one quart of vinegar, add $\frac{1}{2}$ pounds of brown sugar, two ounces of whole cloves, one ounce of stick cinnamon (broken in pieces), one ounce of mace and one ounce of whole allspice. Bring to the boiling point and let boil three minutes. Pour over plums, cover and let stand overnight. Drain, again bring syrup to the boiling point, pour over plums, cover and again let stand overnight. Repeat the process for two more consecutive days.

SPICED PEARS

Wash one half peck of seckel pears, prick with a fork and cook in boiling water to cover until soft. Wipe tomatoes, cut in pieces, put in preserving kettle, bring to the boiling point and let simmer until soft; then force through a hair sieve; there should be four quarts of the puree. To the puree add two cupfuls of vinegar, one cupful of sugar, $\frac{1}{2}$ tablespoonfuls of salt, one tablespoonful of dry mustard, three fourths tablespoonful of white pepper, one half tablespoonful of cayenne and one tablespoonful each of whole cloves, allspice, mace and stick cinnamon, tied in a muslin bag. Bring to the boiling point and simmer until reduced one half. Pour into bottles and seal.

CUCUMBER PICKLES

Pour mixture over vegetables and stir with a wooden spoon. Stir thoroughly for three successive mornings.—Woman's Home Companion.

"GOING FORWARD"

Every woman is no longer, after the old sad fashion, as young as she looks, but, like man, as young as she feels. It, therefore, behooves her to put thought upon her mental state. Especially she should be careful not to harden and fix mentally into those grooves which were cut by the world's thinking in her youth, but which are now forsaken by the chariots of progress.

Principles need never be forsaken; they are perennially up to date. But methods grow old and people who cling to them grow old with them. The early Victorian style of thought has gone out forever; and the later Victorian style is, to say the least, past its prime. The present is a marvelous time; it is re-creating and reshaping the old truths, but only because it is keener for truths and more intolerant of shams than the age before it.

This age breeds marvels such as aviation and complex wireless telegraphy. It is alive and alert and crowded. The woman who would be young must be youthful in spirit with this eager era. "Say not that the former times were better than these," is a rule she should religiously keep. "Live my life over again!" said a youthful grandmother at 77, with a spirited toss of her white head. "No, indeed. That never was any wish of mine! I'm going forward!"—Harpers Bazar.

ALL DID STENTS

I sent out the following invitation of my own composition to a number of my friends who I knew were capable of responding beautifully and without any embarrassment whatever.

Please come prepared to entertain the crowd For just three, five or ten minutes. Be proud to thrill, inspire, amuse, surprise, subdue.

In such a way as none but you can do. With reading, music, recitation or story to relate. Sing, dance, whistle, jest or impersonate. Although we wish it understood 'Tis not compulsory, yet—do be good. And come prepared to act your part With a brave and fearless heart.

Remember

If above proposal seems too difficult Come unprepared—trust the result. My guests all responded and there was much merrymaking. We all learned many things about each other's accomplishments that we had never known before.—The Modern Priscilla.

OPENINGS FOR COLLEGE GIRLS

Positions educated women can fill to advantage

THE Women's Educational and Industrial Union of Boston thinks that there are so many chances for college girls, outside of teaching, that it has published a book on the subject, "Vocations for Trained Women," written by trained workers and investigators.

Social and economic service—such as the civil service, the state charities aid work, municipal research, the playground work, welfare work in business houses, rent collecting, settlement, social center and Y. W. C. A. work, probation and child-saving work, and economic research—provide a field for the college girl which is fairly crammed with opportunity. For example, in the civil service over 13,000 positions are open to women, and about 3000 of these range from $1000 to $2000 salary annually, while in teaching few receive such pay.

The positions of patent investigators and agricultural experts, government statisticians, librarians and editors are special fields of opportunity. One woman, herself at work in advance research for the bureau of labor, says that women stand a particularly good chance because the salaries are not large enough to attract the best men, and therefore the picked woman has the advantage. The civil service commission in Washington can be written to by any girl for the manual of examinations, blanks, etc. The best way is to take as many examinations as possible, so as to have a chance at several positions. Examinations are taken about a year and a half before any appointment, so such a delay must be allowed for in a girl's plans.

A hundred positions or so in research work are open to girls who like the study of economics. A number of institutions are now offering special training for such work, with fellowships varying from $100 to $1000. The New York Bureau of Municipal Research has 35 employees, of whom 16 are women. One college girl in the research field is doing editorial research work, another pursuing special investigations, a third in charge of office bulletins and supplies. Salaries run up to $2000 a year.

Rent collecting is extremely interesting and is an education in social problems. The owners of model tenements or of apartment houses are glad to employ women in this way at from $12 a week up to twice and thrice that salary. In two years one New York collector says, a girl should be earning $20 a week. An experienced collector must be able to take entire charge, renting the property, repairing it and keeping its accounts.

Welfare work is now going on in all sorts of businesses—potteries, celluloid factories, department stores, cotton mills—and the salaries range from $1000 to $3000.

Private catering offers a profitable field, and the "visiting housekeeper" in some cases earns a good salary by managing the household affairs of three families or more. The head of the dress-making department in a large Fifth avenue shop was trained at Pratt Institute, and is paid $3750 a year, and her assistant is a Wellesley graduate at $1500 a year. Another Pratt Institute graduate is a partner in a highly successful millinery house in Washington. A third is an interior decorator in New York, employing nearly forty workers. Supervisors of domestic arts in the public schools receive from $1200 to $3500 a year salary.

Agriculture invites the educated woman more and more. Dairy and poultry farming, bee keeping, market gardening and the growing of small fruits, are all open to girls who have access to the land. A girl of ordinary strength can take care of 500 chickens and make her expenses and $1 a hen to boot. Many have already done much better than this, especially when they combine gardening or fruit growing with it. Assistants in laboratories engaged in horticultural work, botany, plant pathology, etc., can earn from $500 to $1000.

Advertising is a business line in which many girls have been remarkably successful. Many women make a specialty of advertising illustrations for garments for women's wear. Women are at present holding about 16 per cent of the responsible and executive positions in department stores, but few or none of the buyers, office heads, etc., are college women so far, on account of the small pay at the beginning of all store work. For a trained and clever girl, however, the chances are so great that she should be willing to work for a while at any wage to put herself in the line of promotion. In the real estate business women are becoming recognized. A course in real property law will assist a beginner materially. About $900 the first year is the amount one woman worker in the business thinks to be fairly possible.

Clerical, secretarial, library and literary work are increasingly open to college women and require little explanation as to opportunities.

ONE MAY FEAST ON FLOWERS

Delectable dishes made from blossoms, leaves and bulbs

FLOWER eating is mostly confined to the form of salads, as the delicacy of the aroma is destroyed by fire, and, really to enjoy the nectar of the blossoms one must take them uncooked.

But the tubers and roots of some flowers may be cooked and make excellent dishes, according to the Toronto World. For example, there is the small tuber of the tuberous nasturtium, which is very delicious either cooked or raw, and has a spicy flavor somewhat like a radish. The small bulbs may be eaten served like radishes or cooked in a variety of ways, boiled, saute, curried, fried or baked.

The tuber or bulb of the dahlia has been for some time a favorite new vegetable. These bulbs are singularly delicious and may also be eaten either cooked or raw. For salad, sliced raw, they are very tasty, and cooked they furnish a novel and delectable dish. They may be treated in a variety of ways, but a very palatable receipt is that of cutting the bulbs in cubes after washing and peeling and placing them in a frying pan with the bottom covered thinly with olive oil. The cubes are kept constantly moving for about 25 minutes, when a small quantity of curry powder and a little salt are added and well blended into the mass; they are then dish and served with a garnish of watercress.

The hollyhock is one of the flowers that serves for both raw and cooked dishes. It is of the mallow family and has "cheeses," as the seed cups are called when young. These cheeses are very rich and nutty in flavor and may be eaten raw as a salad or cooked and eaten with butter or cream sauce.

The hollyhock is a native of China and has always been used more or less as a food there.

The flowers of the hollyhock are used for salads and they are filled with natural beneficial salts. One may make a salad of the tender leaves, the seed buds and the petals of this flower.

To make a hollyhock salad gather the newly blown flowers and a number of the small seed cups which children call "cheeses." Strip the petals from the flowers and arrange them on a plate with the inside part of the seed cups scattered over them and serve with a French dressing.

Marigolds make a very pungent and tempting flower salad. The petals are pulled from the stems and chopped with flaked nuts and dressed with any favorite form of dressing. One with honey in it is particularly good.

nuts of any kind to mix well together. Place in the center of a salad dish and garnish the edge with the whole flowers, which makes a beautiful show.

For the honey dressing use two parts olive oil, one part lemon juice and one part clear strained honey. Beat well together and add at the last the stiffly whipped white of an egg. Salt to taste. If this is too sweet use less honey.

What can be imagined more poetic in the way of food than a pansy salad? It is a most beautiful dish to look at as well as to taste. The flavor is slightly like that of wintergreen. Both foliage and flowers are used.

The blossoms of all ornamental flowering beans make excellent material for salads.

EARLY FALL HATS

Steeple crowned affairs, reminding one of Mother Goose of nursery days, are favorites among the early fall hats, says the Newark News. A stunning one has a crown of white kid and a brim of black velvet. A tiny conventional bow of the kid fastens a white and black wing into place, a little to the left of the front. While the brim usually turns up all around, sometimes a more becoming effect is secured by having it turn up in front and drop in back. Hats of this shape in white corded silk or finished or unfinished white felt, simply trimmed, are worn at the shore and in the mountains. They are especially smart with the white serge or flannel suit.

ARTISTIC SHADES

This is a day when the shops are aiding as far as they can the tendency to arts and crafts. Fascinating candle or electric light shades are made by putting together, according to the simple directions, the outfit which comes ready for nimble fingers and a paste pot. The shades are in themselves artistic and the work of getting them together is delightful; it requires patience but not the physical effort that the brass work does.—Newark News.

PREVENTS MILDEW

To prevent mildew in a closet inclined to be damp, put a pound of fresh, unslacked lime on a large dish and set on the floor of the closet. The lime will absorb the dampness in the air in the process of slacking, and leave it dry. A small piece of lime will make a big pan full when slacked, so the vessel in which it is placed should have plenty of room.—Commoner.

NARRAGANSETT IN GAY ATTIRE

Groups on beach make fascinating picture

NARRAGANSETT—Newport is more stately, but there is an altogether unique charm at this sister watering place. Life seems more animated here and the beach on a bright morning is a fascinating picture with troops of pretty women in the most fetching of bathing attire dipping and swimming in the clear blue waves.

Silk and satin suits are in the majority here, and while most of those worn have cost a pretty penny many that look quite as smart have been made by their wearers or by some little seamstress and represent only the cost of the material, which in these times of scantiness is very little. One-piece suits are the rule, that is, the waist and skirt part are in one or joined under a belt. Tights or bloomers are always worn under these, but are usually of aaten or woolen of matching color. Black suits are as always first favorites, and are relieved by colored caps, shoes and other accessories in contrasting bright colors where these are liked, but all black or black and white has a way of appearing more distinguished than any of the brighter tugs.

Considerable use is made of striped foulards for bathing suits, but if any wear is to be had from these the foulard must be of heavy quality. Collars, cuffs, belt, etc., to match the stripes and rule with these. Very pretty and comfortable are the circular cut bathing wraps of bright colored flannel that many women are using when they come out. Most of the bathing capes have hoods, but these are seldom put to use as bathing caps are generally worn. The handkerchief shapes remain first favorites for caps, though one sees a number of other styles.

After the dip most of the bathers stop at the Casino for the concert and many lunching parties partake of delicious viands that need no sauce other than the sharpened appetites that nearly every one brings out of the salt water.

Very pretty gowns are sure to be in evidence here, and the Philadelphia and southern women, who are apt to be in a majority certainly know how to carry them off. A dress of white cotton voile, with patches of silet lace, piped with black satin, had the prominent figures of the lace brought out by a few stitches in rose color. The lace formed the yoke and top of the sleeves, was used for a short postilion panel that finished with fringe, and in detached patches simulated a band half way down the skirt, which had the narrow hem of black satin now so much used on lingerie dresses.

A smart suit of white corduroy had the coat in blazer style with patch pockets and handsome pearl buttons; the skirt quite short, seamed and plain except for the buttons on the opening flap on one side of the front; white buttoned canvas boots, white tailored silk shirt, and Panama hat with a black satin scarf and bow completed this stunning get-up. White corduroy skirts for wear with odd shirtwaists are a prized possession of the girls this year, costly to buy made up, but not if made at home, and no trouble at all to laundering.

CRAVATS PAY TOUR EXPENSES

Sue Tye and Carrie Milholland carry ties to sell

BUSINESS offices will be visited today by two charming, brown-eyed girls from Oklahoma City, says the Baltimore Sun. They are spending a vacation and incidentally selling cravats to pay their expenses.

When the Suwanee of the Merchants & Miners line docked two young women carrying heavy bags stepped down the gangplank and started across the street. A traffic policeman was directing drivers of vehicles, when one of the girls approached him and, as he doffed his cap, she asked:

"Can you direct me to the Young Women's Christian Association?" "Yes," said the policeman, and a few minutes later the two young women were on a car. They are Miss Sue Tye and Miss Carrie Milholland. Miss Tye and Miss Milholland are stenographers in Oklahoma City. The object of their trip is simply to see something of this part of the country. It was early in May that the girls, who were about 19 years old, decided on the novel plan of traveling and selling cravats in the cities where they stopped. So they made several thousand "endless" ties. There is a trick about the ties which can only be ascertained when they are bought.

May 17 the girls left Oklahoma City. They went to Little Rock, then to Memphis, Tenn., and after several days they went to Nashville. Leaving Nashville they went to Chattanooga and then to Atlanta. Augusta was the next place visited and then Charleston. They then went to Savannah and sailed on the Suwanee.

"Of course," said Miss Tye, "some persons wonder at our traveling around this way, but we wanted to see the East and not having much money, we decided to cover our expenses by selling cravats. We have been successful and find the experience of visiting the big cities greatly to our advantage, not only in an educational way, but in a social way."

NEW YORK SPLIT OVER LA FOLLETTE

NEW YORK—The first move to split the next state delegation to the national Republican convention will be made tonight when men pledged to the nomination of Senator La Follette will contest the election of William Hecht, as leader of the Republican organization in the twentieth assembly district.

They scarcely expect to prevent Hecht's election at this time, but tonight's fight is preparatory to a real contest at the coming primaries next month. The La Follette men have opened headquarters in charge of E. Stagg Wilson and will make fights in a number of the Congress districts of the state to attain delegates for Mr. La Follette.

The National Progressive Republican League is leading the fight and expects that the next delegation from this state will not be united for Mr. Taft, as state Chairman Barnes and his friends have promised.

Bears Continue Active in Stock Market; Closing Weak

THE STOCK MARKET CONTINUES ON ITS DOWNWARD COURSE

Occasional Halts to the Slump Due to Covering of Shorts Rather Than to Support by Big Interests

LONDON IRREGULAR

Bearish pressure again was felt in the securities markets this morning. Union Pacific led the decline. A few stocks opened fractionally higher than last night's closing, but Union Pacific was off a point at 173 and continued downward. This had the effect of weakening the entire market and prices eased off perceptibly during the first half. At the end of the first half hour price movements were irregular.

Shorts covering more than anything else had to do with the quick turn the New York market had yesterday was apparent. The big interests do not seem disposed to support the market on weak spots and the taking of profits by the bears has served as about the only check that the slump has had.

While the general tendency of the local market was downward in sympathy with the decline in New York there were a few stocks which showed good gains over the last previous sales. Oscola was a weak feature.

The New York market became less active and very irregular toward midday. There was a good upturn following the early decline and before noon some of the active securities were selling well above the opening prices. Stocks again were inclined to sell off in the early afternoon.

Union Pacific declined to 172 1/2 and then advanced more than a point during the first half of the session. Reading, after opening off 1/2 at 146, declined to 145 1/2 and then rose more than a point. Canadian Pacific opened off 1/2 at 238 1/2, declined to 237 1/2 and then advanced to around the opening price.

United States Steel at 73 1/2 was up 1/2 from last night's closing. It declined to 73 1/2 and advanced a point before midday. Amalgamated Copper opened up 1/2 at 63 1/2 and declined to 62 1/2 before rallying. Calumet & Hecla was five points higher than the previous close on the local exchange at 410 at the opening and gained 10 points more during the first half of the session. Oscola was off two points at the opening at 92 and continued rather heavy. Granby opened off 1/2 at 30 1/2, and dropped the fraction. Wolverine was up 1/2 at 104 1/2. Lake Copper opened unchanged at 29 1/2, improved slightly and then sold off fractionally.

Price changes were small during the afternoon. Texas Company, after opening unchanged at 100 1/2, advanced a point and then sold off under 100.

LONDON—Speculation was at low ebb, but gold-edged investments rose in the late dealings and home rails finished at the best figures on an announcement by the government that the dock strike situation was bettering.

A heavy tone was evident in Russians, but other departments closed steady. Rio Tinto unchanged at 67 1/2. Berlin bourse closed quiet.

CHICAGO ELEVATED ROADS

CHICAGO—C. C. Adair, R. F. Clinch, H. C. de Windt, J. B. Forgan, G. H. High, C. H. Regua and L. E. Otis have retired as directors of Metropolitan West Side Elevated and been succeeded by Samuel Insull, H. A. Blair, Ira M. Cobe, and Messrs. Fox, Gulick, Gilchrist and Porter, who were elected directors of Northwestern Elevated last week and presumably will also be directors of South Side Elevated as representatives of the Chicago Elevated Railways Company, which merged the elevated properties.

EXTENSION OF TRACTION LINES

CHICAGO—Illinois Traction's extension from Morris to Joliet, connecting with Chicago & Joliet Electric, will be opened next month, when the McKinley crowd will be in better position to bid for Chicago business. They spent $7,000,000 getting into St. Louis, including their own bridge across the Mississippi, and say they will spend as much at this end, if necessary.

At present the system has traffic agreements with the Rock Island and Eastern Illinois. Rock Island carries the freight to Peoria, turning it over there to the Illinois Traction system and Eastern Illinois hauls it to Joliet, Ill., where it is distributed throughout the corn belt by the electric road.

The company has sleeping cars, parlor cars and ordinary coaches and runs limited trains from all the principal cities in the state on a two-hour schedule and suburban trains every hour.

DIVIDENDS

The Elmira Water Light & Railroad Company declared the regular semi-annual dividend of 2 1/2 per cent on its preferred stock, payable Sept. 1.

The Belding Paul Corticelli, Ltd., of Montreal, declared an initial quarterly dividend of 1 1/4 per cent on its preferred stock, payable Sept. 1 to stock or record Aug. 15.

The directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have declared a regular semi-annual dividend of 2 per cent on the preferred stock and the usual quarterly dividend of 2 1/2 per cent on the common stock.

A quarterly dividend of $1.50 per share has been declared on the preferred capital stock of Blackstone Valley Gas & Electric Company, payable Sept. 1, 1911, to stockholders of record at the close of business Aug. 19, 1911.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey declared a dividend for the quarter of $6 a share, payable Sept. 15 to stock of record Aug. 18. Book will not close for the dividend payment. The previous disbursement was $9 a share on June 15 last. The following shows the dividends declared in the current quarters for a series of years: 1910, 1909, 1908, 1907, 1906 and 1905, $6 a share; 1904, 1903 and 1902 $5 a share.

The Grand Trunk railway has ordered 10 locomotives from American Locomotive Co.

The Steel Corporation output of steel ingots is now 75 per cent of capacity, compared with the high of 77 per cent since first of January.

A high-grade 20-foot vein of semi-bituminous coal has been found near Carleton Place, Ont. This discovery locates coal in a totally new region.

Elliott Split Coal Co. has been incorporated in West Virginia with capital of $1,200,000. It will do a coal and lumber business.

Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. of London & Holt have consolidated, and three 12,000-ton steamers are building for their South American service.

Wheat—The wheat market was weak at the opening, selling down still further on the weakness of the cable, and the western reports from the North.

The Winnipeg market was decidedly weak, and the reports of Canadian conditions show steady improvement. There were some reports of heavy rains at a few points, which would be likely to interfere with harvest. The liquidation of the last few days has brought a great deal of long wheat on the market and there is distinct disappointment at the export situation. Cash dealers say that considerable export business reported was on speculation.

The strike situation in foreign markets makes a serious handicap on business and the very dry harvest on the continent means that the new wheat will be available at once for milling.

Corn—Lower at opening on favorable weather conditions and the decline in wheat. Reports are quite two-sided on corn now; some are claiming material improvement and there has been a growing disposition to believe that the government report for Aug. 1 represented the lowest conditions for the crop and the weather since has made for improvement.

Oats—Prices showed a little decline early on the weakness in other grains and reports of slow demand for cash oats. The large increase in stocks showed slow distribution from receiving centers.

USUAL MIDSUMMER QUIET IN SHOE AND LEATHER TRADE

Business Compares Favorably With Other Seasons, Men's Higher Grades of Footwear Holding Supremacy in the Volume of Orders Handled

The proverbial dulness of a vacation season among the retailers is reflected back to the jobbers and from them to the factories, and it is also manifested in the leather market. Information from the jobbers in this vicinity, and from the few who have been in this market lately, describes the situation as quiet, the shipments of goods for present needs, showing little change from what is usual in midsummer.

Reports show that there has been booked for fall delivery orders which compare favorably with previous years. It is the custom among the retailers to place their rubber orders early, the large ones having already done so, and it is stated that a fair amount of leather footwear orders accompanied these contracts.

There is some business from the southern and western jobbers coming to the factories which, though individually small, has caused a grand total sufficient to put many factories in commission.

But reports from some of the large manufacturers indicate that orders for future business are below normal, the trend of contracting appearing to retrograde toward the customs of the past. While this condition might justify the manufacturers who chafe under its influence in declaring a trade dulness, prospects are such that the winter's run will compare favorably with those of past years.

To sum up the shoe situation as fair is a conservative statement based on information covering a wide area.

Men's fine to semi-fine shoes still hold a commanding lead over the cheaper grade as regards trade volume. The factories making for the jobbing trade are easing up as the charging season approaches, but there is a fair amount of orders for future reserved for the next run. An improvement is reported in heavy footwear, a liberal number of orders having reached this market since the first of the month.

Chrome side leather shoes are well favored in the orders, several large operators reporting conditions in advance of a year ago. The cheaper grades also show an increasing demand and the factories are now running nearer to capacity limits, but the absence of reserve orders creates a conservative tendency.

No particular change was reported by those making ladies' goods. Lynn manufacturers are busy on immediate use orders and what futures have come to hand, but the bookings for the spring of 1912 are still in expectation which is a feature possessing disadvantages in an economical sense.

Haverhill shops are coming to an end of a long summer's run, although orders for low cut have not entirely ceased. The inclination of the gentler sex to wear winter styles of a mannish character is still noticeable, as the heavy high-cut two-buckle boots with full double sole 8-8 heel are going through both the Lynn and Haverhill factories.

Misses' and children's footwear does not vary much from the adult grades, most of the cutting being dependent upon the weekly receipts of orders. These are large in number and small in quantity. One manufacturer stated that 19 mail orders were received on the 11th which averaged 20 cases each. This fairly illustrates the general income through the mail with a few exceptions.

The leather business feels this apathy which is so prevalent among their shoe clients, and dealers stated that last week's contracting was not equal to the preceding one. The indifference of buyers to all the attempts to inspire more confidence in market affairs has been of no avail, sales to meet factory needs being the limit of their transactions. Although the output of leather has been cut down to condition close to tannery safety and no large surplus is visible, the market is easy and hides are off from last quotations nearly one point.

Domestic sales of hemlock sole leather have averaged well in the aggregate, the buyers being many but purchases ordinary.

The bark holiday in England, which lasted during the whole of the past week, caused a complete shut down of cable orders. There were, however, a few English buyers here, as noted in the Monitor, who bought liberal amounts of leather. They report shoe business in their home market as being good.

Union ole is in fair demand and there is no accumulating of desirable lots. Production is kept low. The principal demand comes from the sole cutters, but orders from that source are no larger than their business would justify, so doubtful are they that present rates will hold.

Oak leather had a quiet week, consumers have about reached the end of the summer run and the fall run will not begin before the first of the month.

No change has taken place in sole leather prices, neither are any likely to, even though hides should meet with a decided drop as the leather now coming to market was made from hides bought at spring prices.

Chrome side leather is at best in a moderate demand. Buyers are acting on the defensive and contracting for futures is held back with a belief that prices will break. Tanners say that that is fallacious as the present output is well controlled and a drop in the raw material will show no effect for months to come.

Calf skins show a slight gain in activity.

The makers of ladies' footwear are now a noticeable factor in their consumption. Prices are very firm and stocks are low.

Satin, kangaroo and split leathers are having a steady but not a large demand, splits particularly so, as a foreign market prevents a surplus, tons of this leather going abroad weekly. Prices are easy though no change is reported.

Patent calf and kid are quiet, but jappaners have yet many unfilled orders, so what comes to market is reshipped on foreign as well as domestic orders. Patent side leather dealers are not as well fixed as regards waiting orders. Prices show no depression and an expected revival of the shoe trade keeps them firm.

The glazed kid dealers report a continually increasing business, the buyers showing something nearer former activity than has been the case since factories came into general use. The foreign trade is expanding and this added to the improvement in the home market has given the kid merchants an optimistic feeling. Prices are assuming more regularity and are firm on certain grades.

Those engaged in the shoe exporting business report an increase of from 25 to 50 per cent over that of last year. An interview with one of the largest of these exporting houses revealed a condition which would surprise many in the home market. It was stated that Berlin was the European base of operations, from which Europeans went into many of the foreign countries, and even into Russia, where duties are $2 per pair on men's shoes. American footwear may be seen. Rumors are about that certain Boston merchants are to open distributing points in South America, but as yet they have not been confirmed.

BIG YEAR FOR UNITED FRUIT

The United Fruit Company is having a remarkable fruit season. In fact the assertion is made that the increase in net profits from importation of tropical fruits will in all probability be more than sufficient to offset whatever decrease comes through the falling off in its own net sugar profits and its failure to get any dividend on the $3,500,000 Nipe Bay Company common in its treasury.

In the year to Sept. 30, 1910, United Fruit earned $1,988,491 from sugar operations. It would be an optimistic estimate that placed 1911 sugar profits at anything over $1,000,000 with the probability of their being somewhat less. This means that fruit profits for the fiscal year 12 months must be at least $1,000,000 greater than a year ago to make net profits exceed the 1910 total of $6,552,576 before charges and depreciation.

This in turn implies that United Fruit will this year earn in the vicinity of $5,000,000 net from fruit operations alone and except for the single record-breaking year of 1907 when $5,441,000 was earned from fruit importations, will pile up the largest total of fruit profits in its history.

United Fruit for the fiscal year, now six weeks from its close, should earn between 22 and 24 per cent on its capital stock increased $2,347,400 through a 10 per cent stock dividend paid last fall.

The outlook for 1911-12 is in favor of the largest sugar earnings since the company went into sugar in 1901. Prices are better and crop conditions are more favorable.

CAR & FOUNDRY'S NEW CAR PLANT

American Car & Foundry about three years ago purchased a tract of about 300 acres of land at Gary, Ill., within striking distance of the big Gary plant of the United States Steel Corporation. This land will be utilized when directors deem conditions warrant the expenditure for construction of another steel car plant. For the last two years this work of construction has been held up while various additions and enlargements to the existing plants have been made.

however, it is probable that work will start at Gary, giving the company in time another great steel car plant. All of this work, in accordance with the practice of the company, will be paid for out of earnings. It has been the ability of Car & Foundry to utilize regularly $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 of surplus earnings yearly for the last five or six years that has made it possible for the company to gradually reequip itself to produce steel cars instead of wooden.

When American Car & Foundry was organized 12 years ago 75 per cent of car construction was wood. Today 75 per cent is steel. All of this radical equipment of plant has been paid for from earnings. Had it been necessary to do otherwise the company could now be paying 2 per cent on its common and earning it even with 66 per cent of plants shut down.

No figure of the ultimate cost of the new Gary plant can be established at this time. It may run to $5,000,000 but it will certainly not touch $10,000,000 as has been rumored, at least for many years.

STANDING OF THE CLEARING HOUSE BANKS OF BOSTON

Slight Changes Made in the Actual Legal and Average Actual Reserves From Last Week's Figures

The individual reserve standing of local national banks, members of the Boston clearing house, at present and a week ago, is presented in the table given below. In addition to the legal reserve carried here and in New York (one-half may stand in the form of deposits with the New York correspondent banks), we compute what may be called actual reserve at present, as indicated by the excess reserve in New York. The excess of deposits with New York reserve agents over the amount which may be counted as half of legal reserve is here counted part of reserve instead of simply an offset to deposit liabilities, as is done in figuring legal reserves.

The excess or actual reserve over 25 per cent denotes the amount which might be deducted from the total reserves in both cities, Boston and New York, and still leave the legal reserve intact.

No reserve is computed against government deposits. The table follows:

	Legal	Actual	Excess
Aug. 12	Aug. 12	Aug. 12	Aug. 12
Union	25.6%	25.3%	28.5%
Old Boston	27.1	26.8	31.2

New England	26.1	26.4	26.1

Wintrop	26.3	25.9	29.6
Commercial	25.5	25.3	27.4
Average	25.9	26.2	27.6

Average legal reserve is 3 per cent lower and average actual reserve is 2 per cent higher than a week ago. Thirteen of the 17 banks are stronger than last week in legal reserve and 8 in actual reserve. Two banks are below the 25 per cent legal reserve, against two below last week.

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS—An experiment of far-reaching importance and of the greatest interest has just been carried out by two officers on a biplane. Ascending to an altitude of 500 meters in an aeroplane fitted with a new type of apparatus for wireless telegraphy, these officers were enabled to communicate with the Eiffel tower, some 500 kilometers distant.

At one time it was considered a step of the utmost importance when it was proved that an aeroplane could leave the base to which it was attached, fly over the enemy's country and return with a description of their position.

Now, however, the message can be delivered before the aeroplane commences its return journey; indeed, the description of the country and the disposal of the forces can be telegraphed back as they are discovered.

The greatest value is attached to the experiments above referred to. It appears that the apparatus employed weighed about 21 kilograms and that the required spark was produced by an appliance driven by the aeroplane engine. In the meantime some further interesting experiments have been carried out in connection with naval scouting at Cherbourg, when the pilot of a Deperdussin monoplane was able to follow with ease, from a height of 1700 feet, the operations of submarines both on the surface and some 80 feet below the water.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA FOR MONTH HAS
$4,744,910 TRADE

(Special to the Monitor)

ADELAIDE, Aus.—According to the statistics for the month of May recently published, the overseas trade of this state shows a substantial advance on the previous year's figures. The total trade for last month was valued at £248,982 ($4,744,910), against £278,312 ($3,936,500) for the corresponding period in 1910.

Wheat and flour exported were valued at £202,072; and since the beginning of the shipping season there has been exported overseas a total of 11,775,187 bushels of wheat and 21,689 tons of flour.

The values of the other important items of exports for May include: Copper and ores, £230,489; wool, £15,976; skins, etc., £27,397; tallow, etc., £6789; fruit £2031.

Fresh fruit exported during the season now aggregates 67,933 cases. The exportations of butter for the season total 1750 tons.

LETTERS DATE BACK
TO YEAR 1422 IN OLD
LONDON CITY RECORD

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The town clerk, Sir James Bell, in his annual report to the city corporation of city records, states that the records clerk, Dr. Reginald Sharpe, has prepared a calendar of letters dealing with the period between the years 1422 and 1461. Many of these old records are of great public interest.

There is an account of the city's claim for service at the coronation of Henry VI, when the lord mayor received the gold cup and ever by right of office as assistant to the chief butler; also the record of Henry VI's subsequent reception and coronation as King of France, in Paris.

There are letters reporting the progress of the war with France, from the duke of Bedford and the earl of Salisbury; also a letter from Calais in 1435 when the town was hard pressed by the enemy, beseeching the lord mayor and aldermen of London, "as the principal of all the cities in the realm," to use their influence with the King and his council to obtain relief.

The calendar also refers to a right of sanctuary claimed by the church of St. Martin le Grand, and to various economic questions and the methods of dealing with them 500 years ago; the treatment of aliens, the payment of members of Parliament, trade unions and also the system of apprenticeship.

FRANCE AND SPAIN
FIND MODUS VIVENDI
IN MOROCCO TANGLE

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS—The first material progress in the settlement of the Moroccan question is the agreement arrived at between M. Geoffroy, the French ambassador at Madrid, and M. Garcia Prieto, secretary of state, representing the Spanish government, whereby a modus vivendi has been found for dealing, at any rate provisionally, with matters troublesome to both countries.

The arrangement has been received with much satisfaction in Spanish governmental circles, and it is hoped that it will shortly remove all existing as well as prevent future difficulties of a similar character.

The first paragraph of the modus vivendi provides: That the officers and soldiers of the Malhalla Chieriffienne shall not cross the Lougous, but shall remain on the left bank; and that the Spanish officers and soldiers shall not cross the Oued, but remain on its right bank. This will avoid any contact between them for the future.

The second paragraph provides that the Spanish military authorities shall not enroll any deserters coming over from the army of the Malhalla Chieriffienne, the Spanish and Chieriffienne military authorities mutually agreeing to return the horses and arms of those who have deserted.

The third paragraph relates to the regulations governing those of French nationals, traveling in the region provisionally occupied by Spain. It provides that no obstacles will be placed in the way of Frenchmen coming from Tangiers, Fez, or Laroche by El-Kear. They must, however, be provided with a passport by the diplomatic or consular representative, declaring their identity. This will enable them, as also the persons in their service, to retain their arms.

It is hoped that this agreement will provisionally meet all present difficulties between France and Spain, and pave the way for the full and complete adjustment of all matters between the two countries in regard to Morocco.

NEW HAVRE TO PARIS
RAILROAD IS WANTED TO TRAVERSE ROUEN

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS—Upon the initiation of the Rouen municipality and other local bodies in the departments of Seine-Inférieure, Eure and Seine-et-Oise, a meeting of great importance to the commercial community has just been held at the Hotel de Ville, Rouen, for the purpose of protesting against the survey made by the engineers of the Western State Railway of the proposed new second railroad to be constructed between Havre and Paris.

The meeting was well attended, and included the senator and president of the Rouen Chamber of Commerce, Richard Waddington, Senator Miliard and a number of deputies, local councillors and well-known public men of the three departments.

A resolution was passed demanding that the new line should pass through Rouen, absolutely independently of the existing line, and protesting against the scheme for the quadrupling of the existing line between Paris and Pont-de-l'Arche, which was described as being excessively costly, comparatively useless, and prejudicial to the present system of navigation. The Western Railway Company's scheme included the proposal that the new line should pass over the Seine by means of a viaduct to be constructed in the district of Aizier. It is contended that the proposals of the Western Railway will not be allowed to mature if the commercial men of western France can prevent it. The new line from Havre to Paris is declared to be a greatly needed public want, and it is hoped that it will shortly be constructed.

SIR W. R. ADKINS
WINS REELECTION

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The vacancy in the Middleton division of Lancashire caused by Sir W. R. Adkins accepting an office of profit under the crown and so necessitating the resignation of his seat, has terminated in his reelection, though by a considerably decreased majority.

Sir W. R. Adkins has represented Middleton in Parliament since 1906, in which year he supplanted, by a slender majority, the Unionist who had held the seat in the previous Parliament. In 1906 his majority was 1533, in January, 1910, it had fallen to 1403, and in December of the same year it fell further to 787, a figure which has been almost halved now by its reduction to 411.

In this last election the Liberal poll has fallen off to the extent of 208, while the Unionist has shown a gain of 168. The final figures were as follows: Sir W. R. Adkins, Liberal, 6863; W. A. S. Hewins, Unionist, 6452. Liberal majority, 411.

TRADITION LINGERS

(Special to the Monitor)

Port Appin, on Loch Linnhe, in North-west Argyleshire, Scotland, lies 14 miles north of Oban, midway between Oban and Ballachulish. It is an idyllic spot for a quiet holiday and contains one hotel, a few scattered houses, a store, a postoffice and a pier. The single-line railway from Oban to Ballachulish passes four miles off, and only the steamer passing three times a day in summer connects it with the outer world.

It is very calm and beautiful on a summer day, with golden sunlight flooding the landscape and reflected in the dazzling blue waters of the loch, about five miles wide. Beyond it lie the hills of Morven, graceful in outline, rugged in contour, blue, green and purple mingling in a dusky haze of humid loveliness. Directly opposite is Kinairloch, with a fine mansion house.

Appin Is Parish

Southward lies the island of Lismore, in Gaelic "the great garden," stretching almost to Oban, low and green, sparsely dotted with whitewashed cottages. In front is Sheep Island and to the north the island of Shuna. Farther on, lies a small island with the square ruined keep of Castle Stalker, built by Duncan Stewart of Appin as a hunting lodge for King James IV. of Scotland. Appin is the parish with the three villages of Portnacross or Appin Station, Port Appin, and Strath of Appin.

A circular walk of 10 miles shows what a beautiful countryside it is, with bays and inlets so deep that they are like the outspread fingers of a hand. One gets back to the sea at most unexpected places, and to see it at its best one must see it at high tide. Its wealth of flowers is marvelous. There are masses of white marguerites among the ripe hay, and yellow ones fringing the potato fields, hedges covered with fragrant honeysuckle and wild rose bushes waving their graceful flower-decked branches. A guard of honor of tall pink foxgloves accompany the wanderer everywhere. Yellow irises, which the Scots call seggans, beautify the damp places, while red campion and blue speedwell border the roadsides. Fresh green ferns delight the eye with their harmony of form and color. Evergreen shrubs and fine trees, oak, ash, beech and hazel stand in stately groups or proud solitude.

Geologist Enjoys

The geologist is in his element here, for marble, quartz and fine china clay alternate with granite, sandstone, whinstone and other varieties. At one point an immense marble arch detaches itself from the main rock, just above the coast line at the point of the promontory of Airds, forming a well-known landmark from the sea. It is a fine country, but too hilly to be of much use for agriculture.

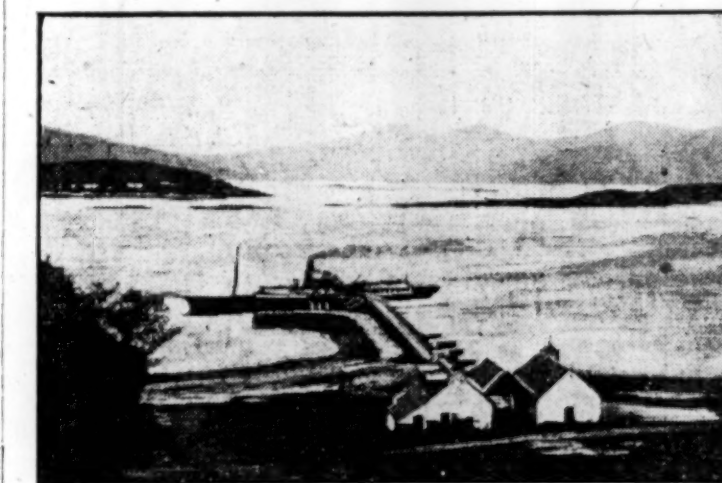

Agriculture on the small scale which alone was possible has given way to sheep, and sheep to deer, so that Appin is less populous than of yore. Many of the lads born in "green Appin" have found a new home, with better prospects, in Canada, the United States or New Zealand.

MR. MASTERMAN GAINS SEAT

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The by-election for Bethnal Green caused by the retirement of Mr. Pickersgill has resulted in the return of Mr. Masterman, the Liberal candidate, by a much decreased majority. Mr. Masterman was uneaten on petition for West Ham, but a vacancy was found for him in Bethnal Green by offering E. H. Pickersgill a position on the magistrates' bench.

A certain section of the electorate was dissatisfied with the way in which Mr. Masterman was selected to represent the constituency, and this resulted in

Port Appin, lying on Loch Linnhe in northwest Argyleshire, is idyllic spot

The question rises: "What will its future be?" May be a place where the weary city dweller may "restore his soul" in its sweet freshness and greenness.

Appin was the home of two great figures of early Gothic tradition, now seen but dimly in legend and song, the ancient hero and King Fingal, whose palace stronghold at Selma is marked by a ruin mound a few miles off, and Ossian, the ancient bard, who sang of the "Maiden of Morven," and loved to praise the beauty of the Falls of Lora on Loch Etive and the river Coe or Cona of Glenco beyond Ballachulish. The name Cona has been revived lately by Lord Strathcona, lord high commissioner of Canada.

Bruce Linked to Priory

With Ardchattan Priory on Loch Etive another Scottish hero is connected, for here Robert the Bruce, the hero of Bannockburn, held a Parliament, the last at which Gaelic was spoken. Still, one hears plenty of Gaelic, "the language of Eden," in Appin.

DIVER RESTORES
FOUNDATIONS OF CATHEDRAL

(Special to the Monitor)

WINCHESTER, Eng.—The work of restoring the foundations of Winchester cathedral, which has already been explained in the Monitor, is now complete. The story of the restoration is quite unique in the annals of any cathedral, the work having been mainly accomplished by one man, W. R. Walker, a diver, who had to work under water and in complete darkness, doing all by feeling with his hands.

In spite of difficulties he has placed a solid concrete flooring where before all was shifting sand and water. Pumping was found to be impossible, as this only drew the sand away with the water and still further undermined the structure.

Bit by bit the diver has removed the peat and has spread the concrete out, bags of which were passed down to him in the water. On him mainly devolved the responsibility of making the work a success. Those in charge of it have so appreciated Mr. Walker's long service, extending over six years, that they have presented him with a silver rose bowl in recognition of it.

KAISER HONORS
UNIVERSITY OF
CITY OF BRESLAU

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN—Breslau, now the capital of Prussian Silesia and the fifth largest city in the German empire, though originally a Slavonic city being alternately occupied by the Poles and the Bohemians, has quite recently been celebrating the centenary of its university.

As is usual on such occasions there have been many festive gatherings at which Silesians of all classes, ranks and grades were represented. At the most important of these gatherings, the Crown Prince, on behalf of the Emperor, read a cabinet order in which the Emperor congratulated the university on the work it had accomplished, and announced that Breslau should in future share with Bonn and Berlin the honor of bearing the name of King Frederick William III., the founder of these universities. Representatives from numerous foreign universities were present, including Cambridge, Edinburgh and Glasgow.

CHANNEL CROSSED IN SKIFF

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—A young Frenchman has successfully rowed from Boulogne to Folkestone in a light outrigger skiff 8 feet long. He left Boulogne at 10:30 a.m. accompanied by a small tug, and in spite of a strong flood tide did the crossing in just over seven hours, landing at Folkestone at 5:45 p.m. amid the cheers of a large crowd. A dinner in his honor was given in the evening.

PORTUGAL SETTLING
COLONIAL QUESTIONS
WITH GREAT BRITAIN

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The director general of the Portuguese colonial office, Senhor Andreda, arrived recently in London for the purpose of discussing various outstanding questions in connection with the colonies. Referring to the matter in conversation with one of Reuter's representatives, Senhor Andreda said:

"I have come here to discuss various matters with the British colonial office which, though small, have remained outstanding for some time. They are chiefly connected with Portuguese East Africa, and in particular with the improvement works to be undertaken at Lorenzo Marques, which involve the expenditure of about £1,000,000 ($5,000,000.)

"In connection with this work there are some questions relating to the Transvaal tariff and other matters. For the present it is considered advisable not to touch upon financial matters or the question of a loan until the recognition of the republic has taken place."

Referring to the question of native labor in San Thome and Angola, the Portuguese minister said:

"Much of the foreign criticism directed against the labor conditions in these colonies was ill-informed, but mistakes were certainly made. The Portuguese government has now, however, made a clean sweep of the old culpable officials, and possesses in the new labor law an admirable check against abuses in recruiting, which, in the future, is to be only for a term of two years. At the end of this time the laborers are to be repatriated and renewals of contracts will not be permitted.

"To administer this law the government has appointed a judge of the higher court whose ability and intentions are above question. The system introduced is that which has worked so satisfactorily in Mozambique. The wages of the men are paid into the court before the laborers are enrolled, and their pay, month by month, is lodged with the authorities in advance."

GROWTH OF STATE'S RAILWAYS REQUIRES
LARGER EQUIPMENT

(Special to the Monitor)

ADELAIDE, S. Aus.—Railways and up-to-date transport facilities have played an important part in the development of this state. At the present time there are 2000 miles of railways operating and in course of construction; and with the exception of 40 miles, which was built for the purpose of conveying iron stone for the Broken Hill Proprietary Company's smelters they are all state-owned; consequently the revenue and tonnage returns from railways may be taken as a reliable indication of progress generally.

During the recent prosperous years the returns have risen above all previous records, and the high totals will be exceeded for the current financial year. Grain is one of the chief commodities handled; but the activity in Broken Hill has been responsible for the carriage of large quantities of ores and materials for the mines. In one week of this month no fewer than 3200 trucks were loaded at the mining city and they represented approximately 22,400 tons of ore.

Wheat is moving in large quantities to the outports. From the beginning of November to June 10, 11,658,924 bushels were conveyed to the seaboard; and as showing the increased area which is coming under cultivation this season, the quantity of artificial manures carried was 15,176 tons, which is 2431 tons in excess of that carried last year.

To cope with this growing business it has been found necessary to considerably add to the available rolling stock, and there are now in course of construction at the government and private workshops engines, carriages and wagons to the value of £400,000 ($2,000,000).

KING IS ARBITER

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The King has interested himself in making peace between some men and their employers in South Wales. The men appealed to the King, therefore when he was in Wales recently he had an interview with representatives of both sides, and went thoroughly into the matter. He took only first hand information, and gave sound advice, and it is hoped that a happy settlement of the differences will in consequence soon be arrived at.

Banking Interests China's

SYSTEMS DIFFERENT

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The International Society for the Promotion of Commercial Education is holding its fifth annual meeting at the London School of Economics. Two hundred delegates from 16 different countries are attending the daily meetings and they continue for three weeks. The object of the delegates is to acquire a knowledge of the latest business methods employed in England.

One of the four Chinese delegates sent over by the Chinese government is much interested in banking, and he said:

"I have been this morning to a splendid lecture on English banking by Ruth Jackson, the well-known director of the Bank of England, and learned much. We are here to get ideas. We are not here to originate; the powers will not give us time for that. Imitation is the quickest mode of progress. When we get back we shall try to get our ideas developed and put into practice."

What seems to interest the German most are the working conditions, the factory regulations, and the standard of living in England. One of the delegates said that what they noticed especially was that the British workingman has greater liberty and freer scope for his individuality. "The German system of having a foreman over every three or four men and an overseer over groups, and a manager over the overseers, does not prevail here to such an extent," he said.

The German delegates had visited many of the dwellings of the working people, and comparing them with those of their own country, said:

"We think them better off and freer in their small separate cottages than the German workmen in their flats in huge blocks, with common kitchens, laundries and dining rooms."

Hamlet Father of Our College English

WRITING of Hamlet's use of slang and incidentally of his sharp reactions from tragic intensity to jest and careless chaff, Professor Allen of Missouri University writes to the New York Post:

Hamlet drops easily into slang—college slang, one might say—even in his letter to Ophelia: "Thine ever more, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him."

Guiderstern: Oh, there has been much throwing about of brains.

Hamlet: Do the boys carry it away?

Polonius: The actors are come hither, my lord.

Hamlet: Buz, buz!

For such news, the modern collegian would, perhaps, say "chestnuts," unless there is something later.

Rosencrantz: My lord, you once did love me.

Hamlet: And do still, by these pickers and stealers.

The modern college slang for hands is "lunchhooks." These, however, are only a few of the illustrations that any one may find for himself in the play.

To understand the appreciation of "Hamlet" by the people of the time, we must take into account the fact that much of standard English in our day was slang to the frequenters of the Globe. Many of our most useful words, as "mob," "cab," "boss," etc., came in as slang, and in the next decade "graft," "stunt," "dope," and hundreds more will lose their quotation marks.

Actors Incorrect in Their Costumes

Describing the work of various famous actors in Shakespeare's plays a writer in the Century says:

John Henderson did not undertake Othello, but he played Iago, and he was the first among actors of that part to speak the rhymed lines with which Iago responds to Desdemona's inquiry concerning what would be his praise of "a deserving woman indeed" as if he were slowly and carefully composing them, and not speaking them as a composition which had been committed to memory. He dressed Iago in any military garb that he pleased to please his fancy, for he was absolutely heedless of propriety of costume. Record is made of the fact that he prided himself on having, in the course of one London season, acted 10 different parts in the same apparel.

Kemble's dress, as Othello, was strangely incorrect. At one time he wore a portion of the uniform of a British military officer and with that he combined Turkish trousers and a turban!

Othello—not Romeo—is the supreme representative lover, unmatched, as such, in all Shakespeare and all fiction.

The rippling low laughter of corn, beloved of the sun and showers, The silver-winged clouds that are borne to where the rich sunset flowers— The beauty that lies on the wheat, the perfume the meadow distills, A voice, unspoken sweet, that calls from the far, blue hills.

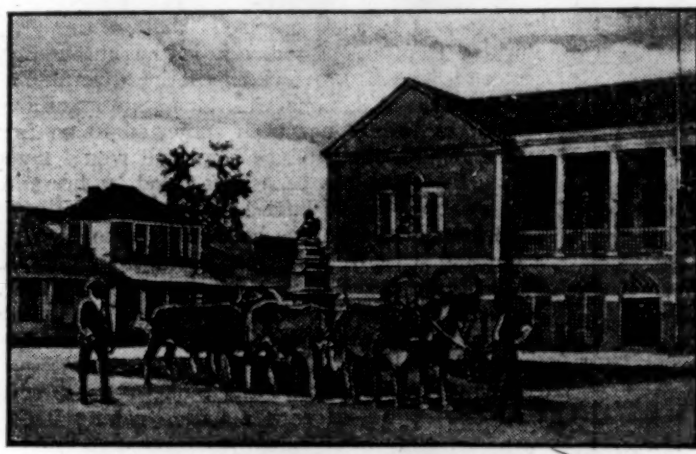

The bells of the song-sparrows rung—the flutes of the meadowlarks blown, Green walls of a brook overhung with elder whose fragrance is sown, Broadcast on the dallying breeze to loiter, and linger, and fall, In the depths of the billowy trees, at the feet of the bittersweet pale.

STREET SCENES IN JAMAICA

COURT HOUSE, MONTEGO BAY, JAM.

THIS picture shows one half of the court house at Montego Bay, Jam. It was built in 1804. The lower portion and a part of the upper floor are used for official purposes, and the wing as a ballroom and public hall for entertainments. On the veranda the Citizens Association band may be heard once a week. The Mysore or Indian cattle are known by the large humps on the back and the tall horns which curve inward.

New Found to Be Ever the Old

That there is nothing new under the sun is becoming more and more axiomatic. It is surmised that the Egyptians under Pharaoh knew of radium, that the Assyrians and Chaldeans were acquainted with electricity and that aviation was not unknown to the ancients. Now we learn that frescoes and bas-reliefs in Crete show that in the depths of past ages huntresses wore leather boots and big hats, like those used by American cowboys, and that an archeologist has come to the conclusion that the fashionable Cretan ladies 2000 years before the Christian era appeared in public with boots with heels, the straight mantle and jupe culotte; in fact, says a Paris contemporary, just like a lady from one of the celebrated dressmaking establishments in the Rue de la Paix.—London Globe.

Coloring Fireworks Is Jealous Secret

NOWADAYS most of the romance of industry is crowded out when everything is brought down to hard and fast processes through the use of machinery. But there is something fascinating in the thought of secrets handed down from generation to generation and withheld from the public through hundreds of years of their use and development among working men. Such a case exists in the art of coloring fireworks. It is said there are only 15 men in the world today who know the secrets of the best colored fires that are used in pyrotechnics. There are 25 large fireworks factories in this country and two each in England, France and Italy. Of the 15 men who know these trade secrets perhaps five or six know all the details of the manufacture. While there are scores of printed recipes for making colors, the real recipes for the beautiful colored displays that can be handled with safety belong to this chain of men, and have been for centuries in Europe handed down from father to son or to a successor who is considered as a son.

The fireworks manufacturer, says Everybodies, is dependent on his color mixer. There is a story of one man who wanted to establish his business on a conventional basis who was greatly surprised and aggrieved when his color mixer refused to write out his formulae and place them in the hands of his employer.

ANIMADVERSIONS ON THE SPACE BETWEEN THE WORLDS

WE HAVE laughed a good deal about Professor Lowell's fancy-flights as to the planet Mars; but when we dip for a few moments into encyclopedic articles on the stellar systems we understand that to an astronomer Mars, less than 50,000,000 miles away, may seem to be fairly crowding us on the sidereal race course. We really escape him but by a hair's breadth, if indeed we are not lying cheek by jowl with him.

For the astronomer our own solar system must be quite a humdrum subject of talk, like local politics or rotation in office in the sewing circle. Astronomers, like modern newspaper billionaires, scarcely speak in less than 10 figures. They thought, for example, that the star 61 Cygni might be our nearest neighbor outside our own solar system, so they set out to hail it by their surprising system of parallax, and incidentally discovered that a dimmer star, Alpha Centauri, is only half as far as the Cygni. Alpha Centauri is 25,000,000,000 miles away (let the typesetter count four groups of zeros there); but 61 Cygni is nearly 50,000,000,000 miles away—twice as far.

A writer in the New York American lately commented on these things as a rebuke to humanity when we fret about a dollar and a half. And also when we boast of our doings. Some one was acclaimed by his friends as a famous voyager, in that he had traveled, from 1804 to 1911, 3,500,000 miles at sea. To reach Alpha Centauri he would have to travel, at the rate of 20 miles an hour, 142,000,000 years.

Alpha Centauri is a million times bigger than our sun and our sun a million times bigger than our earth. On Alpha Centauri might dwell beings to whom we should seem less than specks of dust. When we see ourselves in relation to the immensities of the universe what can we do but sit down and count our sublimity blessings? Does the fit of our collar or the texture of our steak really seem worth worrying about?

But the great thing which contemplation of the figured vastnesses of space does for one is to hint the nothingness of the human sense of space and substance. The infinitely small—which from this point of view is necessarily as perfect, yes and as important to creative might, as the infinitely great. Even to human sense the material bulk of a thing does not determine its value. There is no great or small, then.

Set the magnifying glass on a drop of water and here is a world of activity, a thousand perfected organizations which act as accurately as the vast machinery of the solar systems. To behold a grain of sand as a mighty mountain requires only an eye rightly adjusted thereto.

An old mathematical catch further illustrates that space is a mental concept relative, not absolute. If a man crosses a road half way, then goes half the remaining distance and then half that remainder and half that, and so on, he will never reach the other side. This perpetual halving process is practically impossible, since the rude proportions of the human frame or even the ant's dainty progress, are too giant-like. Yet any one may perceive the thing by a simple mathematical calculation. Is the human eye's perception of space and substance then a thing to be taken seriously?

A fly's foot is too clumsy to measure distances we can mentally conceive; and this calculation done, we may turn and measure 50,000,000,000 miles of ether. What indeed is small? What is great?

HONOR REFUSED TO A GREAT WOMAN

COMMENTING upon the fact that the French Academy refused to make Mme. Curie a member merely because she was a woman, a writer in Popular Electricity reminds us that it is indeed significant that probably the most wonderful discovery of modern times in the material world was made by a woman—namely that of the element named radium, with its peculiar properties.

Marie Sklodowska Curie came from Russian Poland to Paris to study at the Municipal school. The young professor who observed her profound knowledge of chemistry made her his assistant and finally asked her to become his wife. At first she refused, for she had decided to devote her life to study, but when he represented what they could accomplish together she consented, and the two, giving up everything else, devoted themselves thenceforth to experiment and research. One day Mme. Curie showed her husband a substance she had succeeded in extracting from pitchblende, which is an oxide of uranium that comes from a single mine in Bohemia. It is very expensive, and the amount she had used had emptied her slender purse, but the substance she had found was so wonderful that Professor Curie gave up all his other experiments to help her. Between them they managed to extract a single gram, which glowed in the dark, and gave off heat without growing cooler or smaller.

Napoleon and Colonial Architecture

To Americans the word colonial means the period before the revolution, when the greater part of North America was a colony of England. It is, therefore, not a little puzzling that a style in architecture which belongs not to the eighteenth, but the nineteenth century, should be called colonial. To us a more reasonable word to embrace a series of buildings for public and private use which imitate after a fashion the facades of Greek temples would be "empire," says a writer in Arts and Decoration. It marched along in step with empire furniture, and is a distinctly Napoleonic style, in so far as this, had not Napoleon conquered Egypt, had not the servants and artists whom he took with him to the Orient revived under his direction the taste for the classic once more—the classic in painting, sculpture and architecture as well as furniture—in all likelihood we should never have had the so-called colonial style at all.

The term, in short, was not invented here, but in England, which concerned herself but little about the secession of North America, south of St. Lawrence, and continued to regard the western hemisphere as a colony. And she imposed the term "colonial" on this curious form of architecture because it appeared in the colonies and so effectively that it remains with us yet.

Later, when Mme. Curie undertook her husband's work as lecturer at the Sorbonne (its first woman lecturer), she chose a small class room, thinking few would care to hear a woman lecture, but was surprised to find her class thronged with people from the world of society—even royalty—curious to come into touch with so remarkable a woman. Mme. Curie also discovered polonium, named for her beloved Poland, and said to be even more wonderful in its properties than radium.

In April they made public the discovery of radium, and the world of scholars seethed with excitement. Honors poured in upon the Curies from every country but their own.

In May, 1903, the Royal Institute of Great Britain invited them to lecture, and there they received their first public applause under the kindly auspices of Lord Kelvin, who was as appreciative as he was learned. The Royal Society gave them the Davy gold medal, and Sweden followed with the Nobel prize. At last France came forward with the Legion of Honor for M. Curie, which he refused "because it had no connection with his work."

The writer thinks this refusal rose partly from M. Curie's unwillingness to receive such an honor in which his wife had no share. With his consent she accepted the Osiris prize of $12,000, which lifted the little family to financial security.

The Amoy pomelos compare favorably with the American fruit in point of size, are thick-skinned, comparatively juicy, but decidedly bitter. The Chinese themselves prefer the Kwangsi pomelo, which is smaller but sweeter. Some pomelos have in a lesser degree, perhaps, the bitter taste of the American grapefruit, but so far as I am able to ascertain none of them is entirely free from it. The pomelo as a rule is not so juicy as the American grapefruit, and I have never met any one in the east who preferred the former to the latter.—From Deputy Consul-General Hamilton Butler, Canton.

Chinese Grapefruit

Various kinds of pomelos are grown extensively in southern China, all of which vary more or less widely from the American grapefruit, although belonging to the same family. Those grown in Amoy are the largest and are regarded by foreigners as the best produced in China.

Of Course

Among newspaper men, the borrowing and lending of money is no unusual thing and the man who has a few dollars is usually ready to share them.

One afternoon a man leaned against the wall near the entrance to the newspaper building. When a young man came out of the door, the older called him and said:

"Dick, lend me half a dollar. I'm all in, and I need something to eat."

"I'm sorry, Barney," replied Dick, "but I haven't a cent. I'm just on my way to pawn my watch."

"All right," said Barney; "I'll wait until you get back. Then you can let me have the half."

Dick did.—Grand Rapids Herald.

When Wagner Met Weber

"Weber's really refined, delicate, and intellectual appearance excited my ecstatic admiration. His narrow face and finely cut features, his vivacious though often half-closed eyes, captivated and thrilled me." When, as a boy of 9, my mother introduced me to him, and he asked me what I was going to be, whether I wanted perhaps to be a musician, my mother told him that, though I was indeed quite mad on "Freischuetz," yet she had as yet seen nothing in me which indicated any musical talent.—Richard Wagner.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT

Practise in Tennis

In developing one's game of tennis the value of steady, consistent practise cannot be overestimated. By practise I do not necessarily mean playing a match against a player where the main object is to win, but the striving by constant endeavor to bring to perfection any one stroke.

Before you begin your match, ask your opponent to direct his service at a certain place. Go to the net, for instance, and ask him to serve the balls at any and every angle. Watch them carefully, and see that you always hit them in the center of your bat; for in this way you will be able to place them where you will. When you find that you have "your eye on the ball," as the expression goes, ask him for "lobs," and work at these until you are fairly sure of them.

Of course you will have to do the same favor for him, but at the same time you will be developing your lobbing, passing, and ground strokes. When you have attained a fair amount of proficiency at the net, go back to the base-line, and work at your forehand and backhand drives, thinking especially of the foot work and follow-through.—St. Nicholas.

Monkey Traps

The press in the Philippine islands describes the way the natives catch monkeys in the interior of that country. It appears that these creatures are very fond of the meat of the cocoanut, but are too lazy to gnaw the outer shell, unless desperate from hunger. So the natives cut a small hole in the shell, just large enough to admit the small, slender hand of the monkey. When the hand is thrust inside and filled with the cocoanut meat it cannot be withdrawn. It never occurs to the monkey to relax his grasp and release the handful of meat. So he chatters and scolds and shows his indignation at being entrapped until the native who set the snare comes and takes him prisoner.—Buffalo Commercial.

Is There a War on Business?

THAT there is any such thing as a preconcerted war on the business of the country at the present time is a preposterous proposition; that people are thinking so and saying so, however, is too serious a matter to be overlooked. More serious still is the basis which a combination of circumstances seems to have constructed for the support of the hypothesis. The fact must be recognized that business is disturbed. It is not necessary to notice Wall street transactions in order to establish this much. East and West, trade is unsettled. "This," says the New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, a clear-sighted and conservative newspaper, "is a period of uncertainty in industry and trade that would be trying to the business interests of the country under any circumstances, but a cloud continually arising from the seat of government spreads a pall over the prospect which makes men doubt where they might grapple more confidently with conditions if their vision were not obscured by it."

Speaking for the West, John D. Ryan, president of the Amalgamated Copper Company, says agitation and interference with business by men of no business training is given in that section as a reason for the dull and unsatisfactory trade condition. From W. M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company, we have an eastern expression. Says he: "This session of Congress has greatly demoralized the business of the entire country. Its total cost in the interruption of business would be appalling if known." A New York business man, writing to one of the newspapers of that city, has something to offer as a remedy for what he terms the "madness" with which legitimate trade is being pursued. "Prominent business men," he says, "who are tired of having their activities thwarted and injured can gather together other men of prominence in business, a protest meeting can be held at some place like Carnegie hall, and the voice of protest can rise in a form that is substantially audible."

Within the last week or ten days the circumstances that would seem to warrant the presumption of a war on business have become more numerous and pronounced. The disposition to pry into the secrets of business, not so much with the view of reforming commercial methods as with that of finding political campaign material, is one thing that has caused unconcealed alarm. If trade and commerce are to be dragged into politics and used as shuttlecocks between the two parties, it is figured, then there is ahead of the country an indefinite and disastrous period of agitation. The situation calls out from the least excitable organs of public opinion in the United States protests of unquestionable meaning. Thinking people will not give credence to the view that there is any such thing as a premeditated and deliberate warfare upon the trade and industry of the country; what they would like to be assured of, however, and what they have a right to ask to be assured of, is that thoughtless, reckless attacks upon industry and trade, primarily intended to advance partizan political interests, shall cease. The prosperity and happiness of millions of people are bound up in business confidence. Neither ignorance nor malice should be permitted to undermine that confidence.

THE woman mayor of Hunnewell, Kan., is sorry she ever took the job. It will be a consolation to her to know that men mayors almost invariably feel the same way, at times.

Albania

THE futility of war has never been more clearly evinced than in the recent struggle amid the Albanian highlands. Several months ago it was pointed out in these columns that the relations between the Albanian tribes and the Turkish government were reaching a place where only statesmanship of the highest order would be able to prevent a terrible disaster. The statesmanship was not forthcoming, but the disaster was. Refused the very demands which have now been granted, the Malisori took to the hills. For months a terrible struggle was waged between the disciplined battalions of the Turkish army and the reckless bravery of the Albanian bands. Such a struggle could have only one ending. The resistance of the Malisori was crushed, but crushed at a cost in one sense more disastrous to the victor than to the vanquished. This is becoming one of the economic truisms of war as waged in a highly complicated civilization. It is interesting to observe how futile the power of mere physical force to attain its own ends is growing.

The great object of government is to keep a nation happy and contented; to raise, with the least possible friction, the supplies necessary for carrying on the administration; and by utilizing the working capacity of the people to the fullest legitimate extent, to husband the resources and add to the wealth of a nation. The Albanian tribesmen made certain demands which were legitimate, and the concession of which would have rendered them peaceable and contented members of the Ottoman empire. These demands were refused, not because they were excessive, they were obviously the reverse of this, but because the concession of them tended to loosen the bands of a doctrinaire system of the Turkification of the empire. If the politicians who control the Ottoman empire had listened to the advice of the countries which have grown accustomed to ruling men of various creeds and nationalities; if they had taken to heart the lessons of modern history, they would have learnt that the theory of Turkification is as impossible today as it was easy in the days of Solymann the magnificent. The only way in which a modern empire can be held together, as a source of strength, is by the concession of autonomy to its various parts. What was possible in the fourteenth century, in Europe, has become impossible in the twentieth. This was made clear to Spain by the loss of her colonial empire, to England through the severance of the United States, to Portugal in the revolt of Brazil, and it should have been made clear to Turkey through the dismemberment of her Balkan possessions. The lesson, however, had not been taken to heart by the Salonika committee which found itself in sudden possession of the destinies of the empire.

Determined to carry out its policy, no matter at what cost, the committee sent Torgut Shevket Pasha to crush the resistance of the Albanians. The story of Torgut Shevket Pasha's success is not one which the committee has had, or will have, any reason to congratulate itself upon. If there is one thing necessary to the Turkish government today it is the husbanding and development of its resources. As a result of the government's inability to treat the situation in Albania with true statesmanship, an already impoverished exchequer has been subjected to an intolerable strain. A whole region, the produce of which would naturally have gone to enrich the state, has been devastated by fire and sword. A people whose labors should have been spent in cultivating the fields which have been destroyed has been reduced to destitution and filled with a burning sense of the injustice and inhumanity of the power under whose protection they are called upon in future to live. And what is there to show for all this loss? The granting of concessions greater than those originally demanded, not generously and spontaneously but grudgingly and almost in despair. These are the consequences of war on the modern state, whether the war be a civil one or waged with a nation calling itself by another name.

WHILE the Japanese naval hero has the freedom of American navy yards, the American secretary of the navy on a visit to Japan's ally is accorded the same privilege in England.

THE American Press Humorists Association, in choosing Boston as a place for converse and feasting, no doubt had in mind the place that New England has had as a mother of humorists and Boston's connection with some of the most famous of our national jesters and satirists. In mid-seventeenth century Byles and Green gave the Puritan capital sectional fame as a place where witty squibs and clever puns were tolerated in the press. It was Boston that gave birth to Franklin, greatest humorist and satirist of all his contemporary journalists and statesmen. Maine was the mother of Seba Smith, author of the putative writings of "Major" Jack Downing of Downingville, written in a "down East" dialect, equaled later only by the writings of Haliburton, under the name "Sam Slick." It was in Maine, too, that C. F. Browne, "Artemus Ward," was born; it was in Boston that he first found work on the Carpet Bag, founded by B. P. Shillaber, author of the "Life and Sayings of Mrs. Partington," a pioneer journal of humor and satire, all too short lived. Massachusetts also is the native state of H. W. Shaw, "Josh Billings." In Cambridge Lowell and Holmes were born, and there now resides S. M. Crothers, who combines the diverse arts of sermon preaching and essay writing, irradiating both with a wit that is charming and a humor that is delicious.

Nothing more distinctly differentiates the American from the European newspaper than the former's formal use of humor and recognition of it as a necessary condiment in the diet served up to readers. Most of the national humor has first found expression in the press, and most of it has been as ephemeral as its medium. But, though ephemeral, it has been influential in "democratizing laughter," in making a sense of humor more widely diffused than in most countries, in ridiculing and thus defeating all efforts to create castes based upon pretension and in puncturing the inflated self-estimates of would-be national saviors. In the earlier days of the nation the humorist reflected a national egotism now somewhat diminished. He found, in provincial dialects and odd points of view, material ready at hand for his mirror to reflect. Partisanship was keener then and politics narrower and baser, and in this field he found rich spoil for satire. Today he must go farther afield for his material and be cosmopolitan in his outlook. The element of the comic in race prejudices and warnings, in the pretensions and piracies of plutocrats, in the appetites of the proletariat, in the tyrannies of the labor unions, in the revolts of the "feminists," in the fads of educators, in the fashions of literature, in contrasts between creed and deed—all these are patent to contemporary humorists. And they are being dealt with in a much more subtle and refined way than formerly, less dependent upon the peculiarities of local dialect for producing desired effects, less given to hyperbole and exaggeration and brag.

SIR ROBERT BUCKELL, former mayor of Oxford, Eng., is coming to this country to study the commission system of municipal government. It is worth anybody's while to study it, and it will be worth Sir Robert's while to notice that where applied in the simplest form it is working out best.

Humility of Anatole France

ANATOLE FRANCE declines to accept the rank of commander in the Legion of Honor, giving as his reason that greater men than he, Victor Hugo and Lamartine, attained no such rank in recognition of their services to the nation. A nominal and perhaps actual act of humility by as great a prose stylist, satirist and social philosopher as M. France is so impressive that at first thought it is but natural to emphasize the ethical and personal aspect of the matter. Modesty is not a plant that flowers in prolific manner at this stage of humanity's existence. Humility is not a cardinal tenet of the triumphant secularism of the day.

But may not M. France's motives have been somewhat mixed? He may in very truth rate himself as of smaller caliber and ultimate lesser worth to his country than the men of letters of an earlier day who dabbled also in politics and made records as patriots. But is it not also possible that he is improving the opportunity to call attention to the inequities of such forms of fame as states, universities and learned societies decree? Why were not Lamartine and Hugo given higher rank? Not because found wanting after judicial, rational weighing of their merits, but because of the intrusion of factors that inevitably distort, and as truly today as in the time of Hugo. What M. France actually hopes to say, no doubt, is impersonal and timeless in its message. It may be to show the great artist's contempt for the judgment of a tribunal that has been, that now is, that apparently always will be, partial.

The withholding or the granting of honorary titles and academic degrees disturbs not men of first rank. It is the lesser breed, in need of crutches with which to walk, who plot and plan to get the decorations and the titles. The really great authors are well aware that their ultimate rank is independent of formal contemporary verdicts, favorable or otherwise.

THE more Chicagoans view pictures of the aviation crowds in Grant park the less disposed are they to believe that the population can fall short of the point aimed at by the Three Million Club.

Newspaper Humorists

It is said that there will be no fewer than 150 stock company theaters open throughout the United States during the coming season. The older generation will be glad to know this; the younger generation, we trust, will have no cause to regret it. The survival of the stock company idea, in the face of almost innumerable discouragements, is one of the remarkable things of the times. There have been intervals, more or less extended, in the last thirty years when, of the hundreds of splendid actor companies that once found local habitation, patronage and honor in small as well as large cities of the nation, not one company remained. Here and there of late years, however, companies established on the old-time basis have been founded by daring managers, and have taken root. Conspicuous among them have been the Castle Square Company of Boston and the Bush Theater Company of Chicago.

It is no small compliment to the managers who have persisted in stock company productions through years when the popular taste seemed to run directly in an opposite direction, that nearly every city of prominence in the country will soon have its own local stock company theater again, producing, let us hope, the dramas that have become, or are destined to become, standard.

One of the pleasing features of the old stock system was the relationship that existed between the performers and the people. The actresses and actors of the leading local stock companies of forty years ago were part of the community. They took an interest in its affairs, and did much toward its cultural advancement off or on the stage. The old-school stage gave a kindly color to dramatic art, speaking through such charming personalities as the Booths, the Forrests, the Cushmanes, the McVickers, the Warrens, the Reighnoldses, the Florences, the Chaplins, the Chanfraus and scores of others whose names and memories are cherished still by tens of thousands.

It is not a bad idea, however, that icemen are talking of taking 10 per cent off for cash. This only makes up for what is already taken off by melting.

FEW contrasts between American and European cities are as striking as the more frequent use of wood for buildings in urban regions of the United States. This is not difficult to understand, in the light of stores of timber until recently apparently inexhaustible and with the national habits of waste and quick gaining of desired ends in mind. But timber is scarcer and higher in America than it used to be; steel and concrete are often cheaper, and are decidedly more durable; and longer views are being taken as to property values, fire risks, insurance rates and personal perils involved in use of wood where population is congested and wealth concentrated in stores of goods, raw and manufactured. Consequently, step by step, American cities have been restricting the use of wood, prohibiting it entirely—save for inner finishing—and carefully defining the type of structure which shall be built of it in semi-urban regions where tenements, apartments and separate houses flourish.

Boston and some of its environs smaller cities and towns have an unusually high percentage of wood construction, compared with a city like Philadelphia, similar to Boston in opportunities for free expansion and in the development of suburbs of homes. Such a use of timber as Greater Boston permits has for its corollary an exceptionally efficient and fully manned fire department. But the department is short of men; the fire engine houses, in many cases, are dilapidated; the head of the department fails to get support from the mayor and common council in his demands for an increased fire-fighting force. Public opinion is dulled and diverted from the real issue by the political aspects of the controversy.

Fire Commissioner Daly is resourceful. If he cannot win one way, he may another. Consequently he announces a campaign against further construction of wooden houses. Citizens are to be made to see the perils of continuance of the present policy. Commissioner Daly argues that, unless there is a reversal of tactics, insurance rates will soon touch the pocket so as to compel action. It is high time that the city's agencies for civic uplift faced this matter and came to the aid of a fire commissioner who is being thwarted by politicians.

EVERYBODY is expecting some vetoes these days, and it seems that this is one of the times when nobody will be disappointed.

FROM explorations already made, it is evident that if industry should ever find it necessary to turn to the Arctic regions for an iron ore supply its expectations, even though they might be extravagant, would be realized. Mountains of iron are awaiting development in the far north. Two of these are situated near the town of Kiruna, Lapland, the Kirunavaara and Luossavaara. Superficial borings indicate that the former contains 750,000,000 tons of ore, the possibilities of the latter are at present unknown. There are other iron mines of tremendous promise in this region. Kiruna, a community that has come into existence within the last ten years, is now shipping iron ore at the rate of 1,500,000 tons a year.

During the last two or three years much has been written and printed concerning the coal mines of Spitzbergen, which lies directly north of Lapland. The contiguity of coal and iron mines that in every ordinary sense are inexhaustible gives excuse, of course, for endless speculation. The world has passed into the age of steel. In practically all constructive work steel is rapidly superseding every other material. Within a few years a wooden railroad or tram car will be regarded as a relic. Even where cement, brick and stone may be used in building, steel will doubtless be employed as reinforcement. It will enter more largely than ever into the making of utensils and implements. Its substitution for wood to the extent indicated already, considered in connection with the rapid disappearance of the forests, will furnish a basis from which to estimate, roughly at least, what the drain upon the iron mines will be in the future.

Stranger things might easily happen than that the world within the present century should be looking to the Arctic regions for its iron ore supply. At all events, it is pleasant to know that the Arctic iron mines are in reserve.
